The 2000-2001 Warrior Yearbook Staff

"Being a yearbook photographer is the best thing I've ever done. I've taken more pictures this year than I've taken in my entire life. The picture on my press pass is really cute, too.

"Yearbook was a lot of fun, but also a lot of hardwork and stress. I found myself putting in a lot of hours after school and sometimes on days off, but it's been rewarding.

Sara Tracy

"No more late paste-ups, no more odd people (Jennie!) No more Mrs. G bugging me to go to class, but thanks for all the advice. Thanks for the help everyone

"I just want to know when you guys are going home, and it better not be

8:00 a.m.!"

"In the Footsteps of A Warrior" is the 69th installment of the Lebanon High School yearbook. The theme was brought up by Kelsey Reynolds, Crystal Schulte, and Brandi Garcia during the previous year. The book is 8.5"x11" and printed by Herff Jones on 80# Bordeaux special paper. Color photos were varnished with high gloss. The staff used Adobe PageMaker 6.5, Adobe Photoshop 4.0, 5.0, and 5.5 to create the yearbook. Our headline font was Klang MT, our copy and caption font was Garamond Light Condensed, and our speciality font was PixieFont. We produced a 192 page book with a 32 page supplement, making a total of 224 pages and printed 900 copies, at $45 each, or $50 after December 1. The Warrior yearbook staff would like to thank our new Herff Jones representative, Jeff Pellissier, for all of his help and all of the wonderful food he brought for us (hint: we really like peanut butter cups). It's been great working with you Jeff! The staff would also like to thank our devout adviser, Sandra Graham. Thank you for the slumber/paste-up parties, buying us pizza, and letting us pick on you. Constantly. And seniors? We'll miss you guys. And for anyone we missed, you know who you are ... thank you so much!

'Yearbook was something I looked forward to everyday. It gave me the opportunity to do one of the things I like besttake pictures."

"Paste-up sing-a-longs to Hanson's CD as long as Less Than Jake is on mute. Jennie: to Massachusetts it is. And to the staff I swear: may the heart necklace find an eternal home in a box HIGH in my closet.'

"To G. and everyone who was here: my next 4 a.m. phone call to my dad will be to my dad."

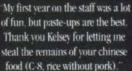

Kelsie Peterson People Editor

"I swear those underwear aren't mine! Do we have any zips, G's? Kelsey do you bare to have a quote in every caption? Carla: I love you! To Dunkin' Donuts it is. Note to self: blame a photographer for all of my mistakes.

"I wish I could just use a lot of big words to explain my experience with vearbook and the weird people. but I don't know what they all mean..."

veah, well. hmmmm... verv, verv fun... very interesting. To say the

"Yearbook,

In The Footsteps of A Warrior

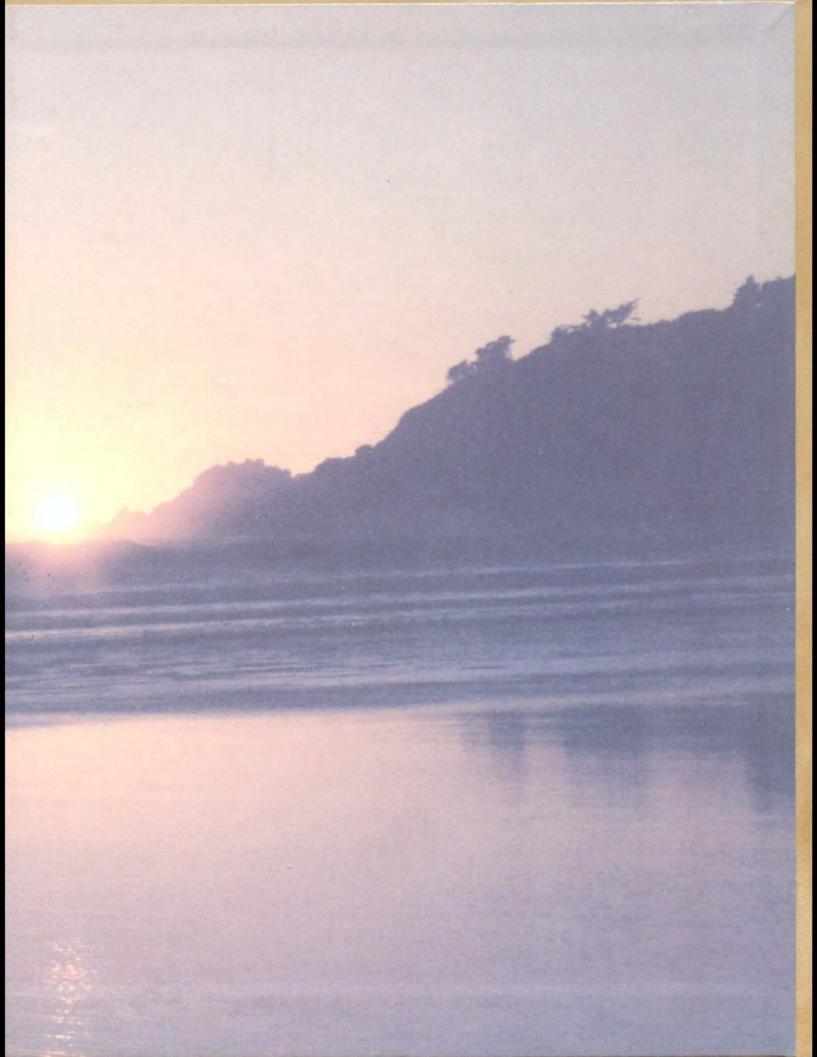

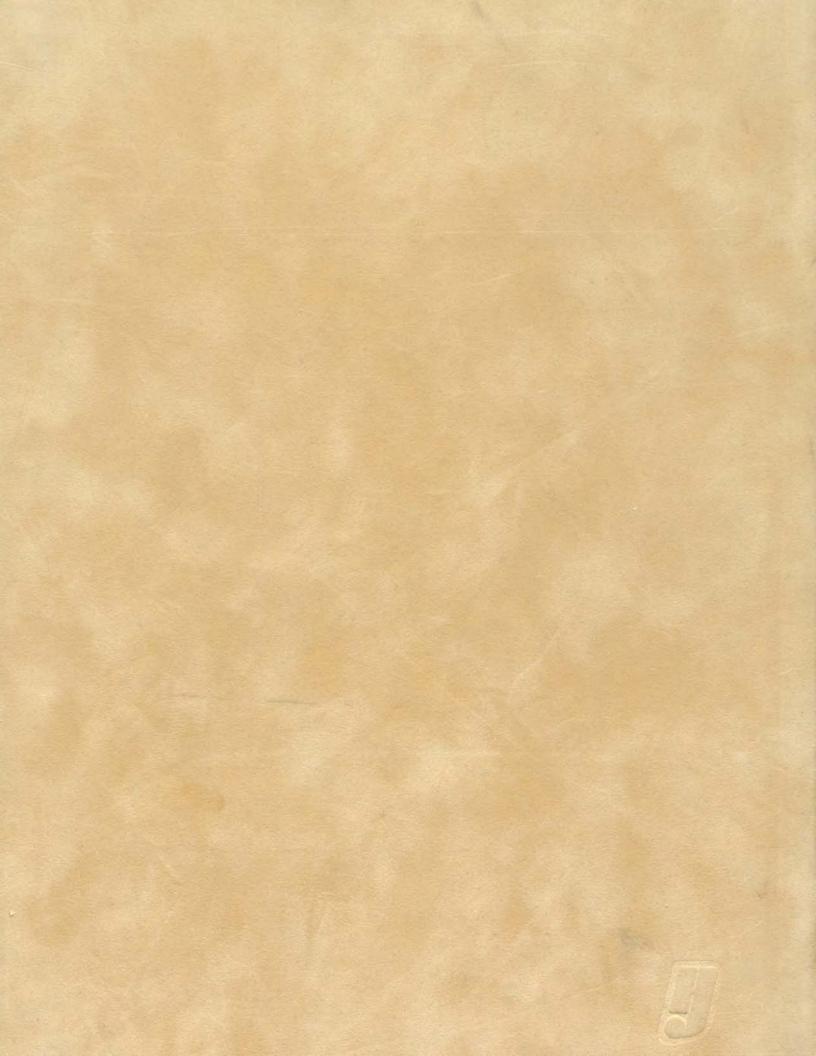

Thank you to the teachers and fellow classmates who helped us to learn how powerful we each are. Knowing that we all have the ability to leave our own marks on the people around us and on our school gives the Warriors of Lebanon High School something to be proud of and a trail of footsteps for the future students to follow.

In the Footsteps of a Warrior

Many Warriors came before us to build the foundation that LHS students stand upon. This year has been one of many positive changes, and our current Warriors have definitely made a few of their own footsteps.

Benches

School's in session, freshmen Mirra Hubbard, Kathee Howell, and Daphne Zurcher cheer at the assembly at freshmen orientation. Freshmen orientation was a great chance for these underclassmen to get a feel for their next four years of school and become acquainted with the school grounds and the people on them. Photo by Tara Meek

Small talk, freshmen Rick Lara, Chris Shafer, Nick Naegeli, Nick Collins, and Travis Rhodes enjoy sitting down during lunch. "I hang out on the benches outside every day at lunch with my friends after grabbing some food in the Snack Shack," commented Naegeli. Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Memories in the air, most LHS students can remember at least one instance where they have spent some time sitting on these football bleachers, whether it was during a game or just hanging out at lunch or after school. Photo by April Sliker

Three's no crowd, freshmen Elise Hickson, Amie Hensley, and Kelley Soltau enjoy the last days of summer on the benches outside the main doors. Last year, the benches were damaged during the senior prank. The senior class put a car on the benches that caused them to break. They were fixed so that students could enjoy the pleasure of talking to their friends outside. Photo by Jennie Cramtet

You may not think of it in a normal situation, but what do the benches and bleachers of LHS really represent? When you sit on the gym bleachers for a pep assembly before a football or basketball game, you probably aren't thinking about all the things that have taken place there. Generations of students have sat on these same bleachers, cheering along with the crowd. Your older siblings, your parents, and maybe even your grandparents have wandered through these halls and sat on these same bleachers.

Best buds, freshmen Sammi Jo Johnson and Cassandra Ackland enjoy their lunches on the benches outside the school. Many students were found eating ouside due to overcrowding in the cafeteria and lunch room. Though both girls were new this year, they were both involved. Johnson was a member of the dance team, while Ackland played soccer in the fall. Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Man's best friends. Nine lives. Old Mc Donald. These phrases have become a fundamental part of our English language all referring to one thing: our beloved pets, who wake us up in the wee hours of the morning because of their small bladders. protect us in the dark from strangers hiding behind large bushes and various other hiding locations, and adorning our front steps with dead mice as a sign of their affection. For these reasons they will forever hold a special place in our hearts.

Alert and wide eyed, "I really love Sam, and I hope he never dies." Sophomore Caylan VandanBos talks lovingly about her eight year old schnauzer who she has raised since he was a young puppy. As she brags about his ability to jump high and fetch anything, she shows how proud she is of her dog. "He was actually supposed to be a miniature schnauzer, but he never stopped growing." Photo courtesy of Caylan VandanBos

Quiet observations, senior Noah Buhr is an aid in zoology. Last year, when he was a student in the class, he was in charge of the crickets. After experiencing zoology he commends Lynden Brown for providing each student with an animal "It ends up making the class much more fun." Although many get skiddish when surrounded by that many animals, Noah feels right at home. "I don't have any pets now, but when I was in first grade I had an akita. It's a breed of dog from Hong Kong. His name was Max. I'll always remember him for being loyal." Photo courtesy of Lynden Brown

Bright eyed and smiling, senior Niky Poole tries everything to make her turtle smile for the camera, but to no avail. "His name is Murry. He doesn't have his head out, but he's cute...just like me!" Niky, who is a big animal lover, is taking care of this turtle through Lynden Brown's zoology class this year. Photo courtesy of Lynden Brown

The best of friends, "Archemedies is my veiled chamelion that I suggested Mrs. Brown buy," commented senior David Hull, "I took care of him over the summer and found that his favorite past time is digging, and he prefers sleeping upside down on the top of his cage." When asked what Archmedies eats he responded "it turns out that he is quite the finicky eater. I had to special order live crickets, 1000 for $20." Photo courtesy of Lynden Brown

Three amigos, sophomore Cody Schrock poses with his two pets, Willy, just turned one, and Max is two years old. "Willy is truely a scaredy cat—no pun intended. And Max is a spoiled baby. He is my mom's dog, so she named him. Willy was named after a cat we used to own, so his full name is Willy II." Photo by Sara Tracy

Soft 'n' snuggly, sophomore Melissa Brazeale holds her four kittens, Sam, Sylvester, Princess, and Sassy, in her front yard. "I had so much fun playing with them this summer. My dad calls me princess so that's how I chose the name for my favorite kitten." Photo by Sara Tracy

It was fate, freshman Brittany Benedict recalled, "I found Patches three years ago around Halloween. I was on a walk, and all of a sudden I heard a kitten meowing. When I found her, her white paws were orange from sleeping inside a carved pumpkin. I instantly fell in love." Photo by Sara Tracy

Whether it's eating hot lunch from the cafeteria, chowing down on a cold lunch from home in the student center, or leaving campus for fast food, one thing is for sure; lunch is definitely everyone's favorite period of the day.

Fun in the sun, sophomores Tiffany Buckmaster and Nicole Suderman enjoy their lunch while sitting outside basking in the fall sunshine. Many students chose to eat outside because they were usually inside all day. "I like to eat outside because I like the sun," commented Buckmaster. Photo by Sarah Aitkin center and cafeteria's names were switched last fall, but starting this year the names were changed back to their original. Many students ate in the student center while some ate in the cafeteria across the hall. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Lets get together, a group of freshmen enjoy lunch in the student center. The student

Speak our minds, the speech team consists of eight members who travel together on the weekend to compete at speech competitions. Every Friday this group would come together with adviser Anne Wittwer to have meetings in her room. The events they competed in ranged from impromptu speeches to debate to expository speaking. "Speech team was what got me started talking, and I haven't stopped since," remarked junior John Reuter, a third year speech team member. Photo by Natalie Barba

Yummy yummy in my tummy, many students benefited this year from the store in Jim Vandehey's room, not only the people who bought the food, but the different causes that the money went to such as new wrestling mats, warm-ups, running shirts, and headgear. "I love getting muffins from Mr. Vandehey's room," junior Pam Leibrant stated, "he's my supplier." Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Lunch time duties, junior Joseph Carter and seniors Jason Burr and Shoni Plagmann work in the Warrior Snack Shack as sophomore Joel Delgado waits for his lunch. "It's a great place to meet people. I work with a bunch of my friends. I never did anything for lunch, so this was a good way to use my time. It gave me great pleasure to see people's smiling faces when I took their money, handed them their pizza, and replied 'Have a good day,'" remarked Carter. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Decisions, decisions, junior Bill Howerton carefully examines the vending machine. "I just can't go a day without gummy worms," explained Howerton. Many students were caught between passing time using spare change to buy a snack. This year food and drink was allowed in the halls and classrooms as long as they were kept clean. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Fashion

Dressed to impress, junior Becky Barnes expresses her individuality with her clothing. "I dress the way I do because I like the style. I guess you can say that it represents who I am, as other styles represent all different kinds of people," replies Barnes. Photo by Sara Tracy "I choose you Jigglypuff," senior Sydney Hansen carries a Pokemon key chain. The cartoon "Pokemon" was brought to our attention in 1999 and was followed by movies, Burger King toys, clothing lines, shoes and much more. Not only children have become addicted on these little animals, but teenagers collect the various Pokemon items. Photo by Natalic Barba

Nail polish, hair dye and camo, freshman Chris Bauer sets himself apart from the rest of the student body. "I think my clothes are cool because they tend to be different than others such as Old Navy and GAP. I have a different sense of style, which I feel is superior to others. I feel comfortable in my clothing, and it is fun to wear it," remarked Bauer. Photo by Kelsey Reynolds

A wild and crazy look, senior Crystal Lacy expresses herself with a different approach than most others. "I dress the way I do because I don't want to look like everyone else. I am my own person, and I am comfortable with who I am. I have dressed this way since sixth grade; it is just who I am, " commented Lacy. Photo by Natalie Barba

The year is 2000. That's right, the first year of the new millennium. Our fashion has varied from bonnets on pilgrims, poodle skirts on dancers, pedal pushers on young men and women, tie-dyed shirts and long straight hair, to spandex pants and shaker sweaters.

Today our fashion consists of tech vests and comfortable jeans. We have been through so many fads over the years that old fads are coming back today. For instance, the "pedal pushers" that teens wore in the 60's are now popular with teens of the 21st century as Capri's.

While some teens go out of their way to be different, others like to wear what is popular, sporting brand names such as Abercromie and Fitch, GAP and Old Navy.

Some teens tend to spend more money on clothing than others. If you buy certain brands of pants like Lucky they can cost up to $90.00, but others only shop if there is a "SALE" sign in the window. "The only time I will shop in a store is if there are good sales or reasonable prices. Clothing today is extremely expensive," remarked Lena Jennings.

Fashion and fads today are our own individuality, whether it is to make us feel more accepted or just comfortable.

Freedom to express herself, junior Jeni Ulm wears what she feels is comfortable for herself. "A person's fashion does not define who they are, but it does help give them a little definition,"remarked Ulm. Photo by Natalie Barba

Different strokes, seniors Rex Husseman, Matt Castro, Jesse McDougal and Paul McQuistan show the different types of styles teens wear today. "I really like to look nice, so I spend a lot of money on my appearance, including my $1,200 24k gold chain. It is just who I am," stated McDougal. Photo by Natalie Barba Service Many people think of their clothing as an extension of their personality, but what about their shoes? Shoes not only go with the outfit but everywhere you do. From comfy to sleek, casual to classy, shoes come in a wide variety of styles, fashions, and colors tailored to the most out-ofthis-world tastes.

Proud to be an American, senior Carla Corbitt sports her stars and stripes shoes as she holds the American flag. "These are my American pride shoes. If you look closely in the picture, you'll see that even my toes are painted blue," Corbitt remarked. Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Pretty in leopard print, sophomore Robin Sliker flaunts her wild leopard print sandals during Gloria Knapp's sophomore health class. "I like these shoes because they go with my black pants. I didn't wear them much until I a found red nail polish that perfectly matched the red furry stuff on the bottom [of the shoes]," commented Sliker. Photo by Sara Tracy

Funky 'n' fuzzy, sophomore Tamara Mann shows off her brightly colored toe shocks. "I wear toe socks a lot. They are really comfy and make me feel unique," commented Mann. Junior Mario Jones, also a toe sock supporter, stated "toe socks make my toes feel like individually wrapped hot dogs." Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Losing his head, sophomore Alex Rauch sports his shoes on the wrong end. "I was walking downtown in a city in Japan with my friend Vivian [Tan], and I saw them in a window, and I said those are cool, so I got them," said Rauch. Photo by Sara Tracy

While electronic devices like these have been around for a few years, portable CD players have been revamped and improved with new looks and better technology. Photo by Natalie Barba

Practice makes perfect, sophomore Maryann Stanko works on her circuit board during electronics. Stanko was the only girl in Steve Robinson's electronics class. "I took the class because I thought it would be fun," Stanko remarked. When asked what was the best part of the class, she said, "using the hot irons is awesome!" Photo by April Sliker Down time, senior Jay Adamson takes a break during lunch to listen to his CD player in the band hall. "My favorite kinds of music are mainly punk and ska, but I like just about everything," stated Adamson. Adamson was drum major this year, and displayed his own musical talents during Marching, Concert, and Jazz bands. Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Very few of us could survive in a world without the modern conveniences many of us depend on. Can you imagine getting ready in the morning without the help of common electrical appliances? As DVDs and mp3s entered the mainstream world of technology we watched the Furby decrease in popularity as Sony's Robot Dogs took over the market for interactive toys. Advances like the AIBO, the camera mounted inside the dogs head, had artificial intelligence capabilities that would soon be able to be placed in actual working robots to preform serious jobs.

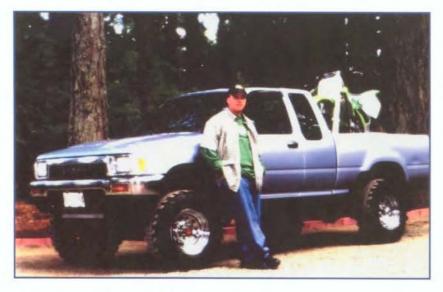

Birthday best, sophomore Justin Dodge likes to listen to music on his portable CD player and headphones in between classes. "I got this discman for my 15th birthday. My mom bought it at Camelot," remarked Dodge. Photo by Jennie Cramlet

Pocket buddies, seniors Adam Peoples and Anna Hayase compare their Personal Digital Assistants. Hayases' also allows her to translate from Japanese to American. "I use my PDA to keep track of my school work, but I would rather have Anna's because it would help me with my Japanese," commented Peoples. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Senior pride, senior Rick Goff has the photographer take a senior picture with his truck. Many seniors chose to take a picture or two with their cars and trucks. "T like my truck because the chicks dig it," said Goff. While some teenagers would rather drive a car, Goff proudly joins those who don't, but chose to drive something bigger because they think it is more fun. Photo By Crystal Schulte

Under construction, senior Mike Brown keeps his Jetta in the shop to work on it and improve the performance and quality. "A lot of people have nice Hondas and trucks. Jettas are becoming more popular around here though, but I had one of the first newer ones. I like having something that stands out," explained Brown. Photo by Crystal Schulte

Hard work, senior Casey Rhoades proudly sits on his 1979 Chevy truck which he has put a lot of time and hard work into. "The best part about my truck, I think, is the built engine. I've been working on it since I was 15," commented Rhoades. He works on his truck every chance he gets and tries to improve not only the engine but the body and the inside. Photo by Crystal Schulte Top of the school, junior Chris Hackworth has the proud honor of driving the highest truck at Lebanon High School. He and his best friend Casey Rhoades proudly show off their trucks. He takes his truck mudding any chance that he gets when he isn't busy or working on it."I like my truck because it's better muddy than clean," says Hackworth. Photo by Crystal Schulte

Stickshifts and safetybelts, senior Ryan Hoover, junior Chase Major, and senior Mike Gross show off their Hondas. The three of them also belonged to a car club in Albany called "Exotic Image." These guys liked pushing their cars to the limits. "I was going 115 m.p.h. one time on Lacomb Drive, and when I went to brake, it fried my brakes, " laughed Ryan Hoover. Photo by Crystal Schulte

Racers

For some students, cars serve as a place to keep their books or a place to meet friends. Some cars were even used as a way to express a students' individuality. "I put all this money into my car because I think it's really cool to get a lot of power out of a four cylinder." commented Mike Gross. Many of the students chose to drive Hondas. Over the last few years, Hondas became very popular cars. Hondas were reasonably priced for teens, usually around 3 to 7 thousand dollars. They were used cars, ranging from 80s to early 90s. Other students chose to drive something different, something they liked, or then again, something cheap that they were stuck with.

Ride in style, senior Kelsey Reynolds poses for a quick picture before she goes to the Homecoming assembly as a princess. "Since I'm an 18 year old without my license, I use my moped when I need to go across town. A lot of my friends like taking turns riding it down my street, and one night a bunch of people were over, and Zach Shanholtzer got pulled over on my moped for speeding. But the funny thing is, it only goes 25." Photo by Crystal Schulte

Mustang Sally, junior Tara Meek and her parents have been restoring this 1965 Mustang for the past three years. Most people strive for customizing, while this car is mostly original. "Ever since I was in fifth grade, I always wanted a Mustang. My neighbor found this one and told my parents," commented Meek. Photo by Carla Corbitt

Hardwork Hand-Me-Downs

Fall of your first year as a high school student, you enter the building as a freshman, and in the late spring four years later, you're sitting on a folding chair in the football field wearing your cap and gown wondering where all that time went. So what's the answer? Homework. sports, clubs, an after school job? It's different for all of us, but we can all agree that the time flew by. What you offer to this school is only a matter of what you are willing to give.

Taking care of business, junior Lyle Cram carefully does his Advanced Alegbra II homework before class in Dennis Olafson's room. "Math's not that bad. At least, I got to sit in the back and read the funnies during class," commented Cram. The posters displayed trash that the students had found on campus and promoted a clean campus. Students were required to take health their sophomore year with either Knapp or Penny Steele. Photo by Sara Tracy

Relay fun, ASB members race against the student teachers and administration in the first pep assembly of the year. The assembly introduced the new administration, the ASB board, and the football team, as well as many other organizations. The student body was bigger this year than it had ever been, and students from all four classes crammed into the gym bleachers to cheer on thier school and show their spirit. Photo by Sara Tracy

All lined up, senior Katie Wopat mans one of the schedule pick-up stations. LINK crew leaders gave each of their groups a tour through the school, showing them the best and fastest ways to get to each of their classes.

Tied up with balloons, freshmen James Barker and Kristy Walker compete in a balloon-popping relay. "The seniors tied a balloon around our legs then they said "go" and each team tried to pop the other teams balloons; but everyone was just falling down. This went on for three minutes...until the red team [my team] won the game," commented Barker. Crazy games, juniors and seniors lead freshmen in a game of Simon Says. The freshmen also participated in group games where they learned the names of the other freshmen as well as upperclassmen and played games to develop trust in one another.

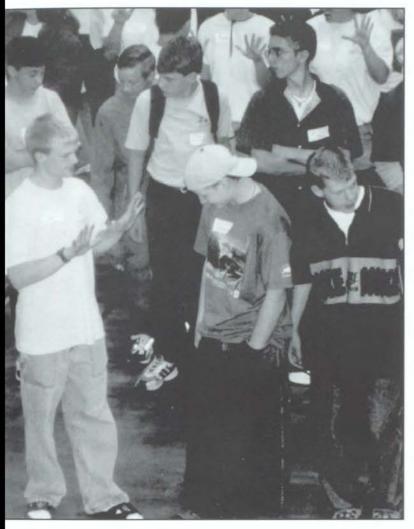

Round 'em up, a group of freshmen sit in the gym and socialize with each other prior to a game that helped the students to learn one anothers names. They tossed a ball around and each time they passed it on to the next person they had to say that person's name. Orientation was a wonderful way for incoming freshmen to get to know eachother, upperclassmen, and their school.

The first week of school was an important event for everyone, but especially the incoming freshmen. This year a student based group, LINK crew, led the freshman through orientation. "Freshmen are cool because they don't have any preconceived notions about a lot of things; they are really open and willing to do whatever," commented LINK leader Rachel Leach. LINK crew is a national organization. This was the first year Lebanon High School officially ran LINK crew. LINK taught freshman that there was someone at the high school to whom they can talk to. It also showed them that respecting and trusting other people allowed them to succeed in high school. Many freshmen were afraid of what would happen to them at high school. The LINK crew was there to tell them whatever fears they had were false. "There is nothing to fear but fear itself," stated president Franklin Roosevelt. Freshmen learned these ideas through a series of games and activities meant to not only inform them, but also to stimulate their mind that high school can also be fun if they wanted it to be. "The freshmen were really responsive to me," said junior Scott Stewart. "I was enthusiastic as well as entertaining. I think the eight freshmen that were in my group listened to me more than if I had just boringly talked to them.

Pay close attention to the ball, freshman at orientation pay close attention as Tina Rimov tells them how their day is planned out. There were informative talks and games at freshman orientation where the students learned about Lebanon High School and how to trust one another. This took concentration that was hard to muster up right after summer vacation. "I remember orientation, but just barely," stated freshman Adam Ulm. "I was so tired; I hadn't had to get up that early in so long. At least, I got to find out where all of my classes were [before school actually started]."

Put your hands in the air, freshman Jeff Antons, Juniors Alisha Mullenix, and Nikki Plagmann stretch their arms as they participate in a freshman orientation assembly. After freshman orientation was over, the LINK crew members helped leadership to conduct school improvement meetings throughout the year. "I met some people in my group [during orientation] who became my friends during the year," commented Antons.

Noon Activities Step on Stage

Pie-eating contests, hair and make-up competitions, tricycle races, and other crazy activities were often seen in the student center during spirit weeks. Students volunteered to participate and were put head-to-head against their fellow students and their teachers. The leadership classes worked hard to come up with new ideas for activities for the students to compete in.

Tug of war, a few students from each grade play tug of war at a pep assembly for the beginning of the winter sports season. Students were split up into two groups, seniors and freshmen; juniors and sophomores, with separate teachers coaching each team. After a long battle, the senior and freshman team pulled the tie over the line and finished off the game. Jim Vandehey and Amy Woodruff both received pies in the face as a result of their teams loss. Photo by Natalie Barba

Squeaky clean, sophomores Stephanie Madesh and Melissa Brazeale groove to "Splish Splash." The sophomore group of lipsynchers dressed in robes and shower caps, and used bath toys for microphones. The sophomore class received third place in the competition. Photo by Sara Tracy

Pep Assemblies Footsteps of a Warrior Mascot

For some, pep assemblies are nothing more than a great chance to escape from class and file into the busy gym and sit on the bleachers with their friends, trying to block out the crowd's banter. For others, pep assemblies are a staple of high school life. Recently, the assemblies have reached out and included many clubs as well as sports. But the battles of spirit and good-humored chivalry continue on as the separate classes continue their long ago established dispute over who will be the master of school spirit.

All dressed up, a group of freshmen preform during the Homecoming pep assembly. During the assembly, there was a dance and lip synching competition between each of the classes as well as a team of teachers. The freshmen lipsynched to "Doin' That Thing You Do" from the movie of the same title. Juniors won first place in the competition, singing and dancing to a song from Grease. Photo by Sara Tracy

Prideful queen, senior Shoni Plagmann gracefully accepts her crown and roses as she is crowned Homecoming Queen. As tradition, the nominees were escorted by their fathers or male guardians from the rally cars to the field. This year, men were added to the court and their mothers or female guardians escorted them onto the football field. Noah Buhr was announced Homecoming king. Photo by Sara Tracy

Homecoming Week Page design by Jennie Cramlet

Homecoming is a time in the year that the school can really unite and show their school spirit. It was one of the most memorable events of the year. We viewed some cute costumes for Pink Ladies & T-Birds 50's Day. We continued the tradition of Pajama Day, a well-voiced favorite and ended the week with School Pride Red and Blue Day. A new addition to the Spirit Week was Super Hero and 50's Celebrity Day. There were incredible hair-do's on Wacky Tacky Highest Hair Day.

Didn't even have to wake up, junior Rosa Park walks through the halls sporting her pajamas. Many students took part in this day because of the comfort issue. Spirit week allowed the students to dress up like they've always wanted to. Sophomores won the Homecoming week competition by gaining the most participation points over the entire week. Photo by Rose Dryden

Hot stuff, powder puff football was a popular Homecoming event. Hundreds of spectators watched the senior team skunk the juniors, 12-0. Seniors Katie Wopat and Shoni Plagmann each scored touchdowns for their team and were strong players on the senior side throughout the entire game. Photo by Sara Tracy

Hold still, principal Ken Woody and teacher Sylvia Harvey participate in the Homecoming week noon activities. The noon activities were a tricycle race, a junk food eating contest, a make-up and hair competition, balloon shaving, and a swing dance competition. The teachers competed in all the competitions. Carol Dinges, Gloria Knapp, and Debbie Edwards lipsynched to "Lollipop, Lollipop" and won second place during the assembly. Photo by Rose Dryden

Food fight, the male nominees for the Winter Formal court compete against the female nominees in a food-eating contest at the Winter Formal pep assembly. Nominees lined up and each had to eat an object of food, including a small slurpee, a doughnut, a banana, and a can of soda. Photo by Sara Tracy

Fire hazard, a group of students enjoy the atmosphere at the Elks' Lodge. Winter Formal tickets sold out the Friday prior to the dance, leaving many students ticket-less. The fire marshall offered to come and supervise the event, a solution that allowed 50 more people to enjoy the dance. "Winter Formal was tons of fun. 1 loved getting my hair done and getting all dressed up. I almost didn't get to go because of the ticket crisis, so when I found out that I could, I was very excited," commented sophomore Melissa Brazeale. Photo by Sara Tracy

Come on in, sophomores Andrew Wimer and Stephanie Madesh join the train started during a disco song. Many of the 400 students joined in and looped the Elks' ballroom, hand on shoulder, dancing and singing to the music. "Crazy dancers, friends, and chaperones all dressed up for the occasion: what fun!," commented Madesh. Photo by Sara Tracy

Memories made, senior Winter Formal court nominees Leah Chisholm and her escort David Libby dance to a slow song directly after the coronation of the Winter Formal queen and king. "What can I say? I had a great date and a great escort.... both named David, which made the night both memorable and fun," commented Chisholm. Photo by Sara Tracy

Flash and flair, juniors John Reuter and Sara Haines tear up the dance floor with some swing. "Winter Formal was interesting, to say the least. John [Reuter], my date, fell off his chair at Marna Linda's, and the candles on the table kept going out because Paul Walker is a horrible busboy. Terrible! Despite all of this, it was fun," commented Haines. Photo by Sara Tracy

Winter Formal A Night on the Town

The choices for Winter Formal court were announced in December during the first period of the day. The nominees for the court included senior princesses Jana Atchley, Natalie Barba, Leah Chisholm, Shoni Plagmann, Kelsey Reynolds, Chelsea Schumacher, Kari Stevens, and Casey Young. The princes were Doug Alley, Jason Buckmaster, Cody Donahue, Donald Holt, Tristan King, David Libby, Scott Packer, and Brett Smith. And, this was just the beginning of it all. The dress, tux, shoes, hair, make-up, tickets, dinner plans...the list goes on. Seniors led the organization of the actual dance: decorations, theme, location, a photographer, and advertising for the event. The board of students that organized the dance decided on the theme "A Night on the Town" and decorated Elks' Lodge with crepe paper, balloons, colored foil, and cardboard cut-out stars. Majestic Art N' Photography took the professional photos, which were set up in the girls' restroom. Halfway through the night, the nominees for the king and queen of the Winter Formal walked and danced their way up the aisle to await the announcement of the winners. As the crowd and the nominees held their breath in anticipation, former LHS teacher Ed Cinquini and Neva Clausen prepared for the crowning. Finally, the queen, Kari Stevens, and the king, Doug Alley, were announced. "I was so surprised when they announced my name. I remember my freshman year; I couldn't even find a date. Wow, have things changed!," commented Stevens. A specialized photo frame that had the theme and year were given away at the end of the night by the ticket takers, as well as the usual memory book.

Dance, dance, dance, a group of students dance their way onto the floor with fast-paced pop music. "I had an awesome time at Winter Formal. All of my friends were there, and we had lots of fun dancing and seeing everybody all dressed up," commented freshman Sara Aikin. Photo by Sara Tracy

Keep your eyes to the ground, junior Michelle Bertalot watches her feet as she line dances along with the other students. "Winter Formal was better this year than in years past, because more people actually danced rather than being wallflowers," commented Bertalot. Photo by Sara Tracy

All dolled up, freshman Carra Schmidt and senior Sydney Hansen watch as seniors Dominic Olvera and Lisa Giese participate in the "Make the Coolest Food Face Mask" noon activity on Pajama Day. Among the dress-up days were Sports Day, Hug Day, Famous Pairs Day, and Red and White Day. The noon activities were a sports relay, karaoke competition, a licorice eating relay, and a sundae eating contest. Photo by Sara Tracy

Chow down, junior Kellie Griner, senior Matt Castro, teacher Gloria Knapp, sophomore Caylan VandenBos, and freshman Sammi Jo Johnson compete in a food eating race at lunch. "The ice cream was really good. I loved the strawberries. The juniors rocked; we came in first, but some how disqualified because not all the ice cream made it to my mouth. This was one of the best noon activities in a long time," commented Griner. Photo by Sara Tracy

Put your had upon your hip, sophomores Kayla Otta, Heather Everett, and Andrew Wimer join in on the "Macarena." "I thought the Valentines' dance was a good way to make a fool of yourself, but also have fun at the same time," commented Everett. Photo by Sarah Jones

The Valentines' Royalty Court was announced the Friday prior to Royalty Week. Nominees included seniors Laura McAlister, Jana Miller, Hallie Fonville, Kaptaan Hickey, Casey Primasing, and Jim Fitzwater; juniors Pam Leibrant, Elisha Mullenix, Joel West, and Allan Plagmann; sophomores Ty Reppy, Nicole Suderman, Andy Benneth, and Andy Wimer, and freshmen Tina Milam, Katie Lindstrom, Kevin Alley, and Ben Walnum.

The Royalty Week dance was held after a basketball game on the last day of spirit week, where the queen and king were voted on and announced. Seniors Kaptaan Hickey and Hallie Fonville were voted in as the rulers of the dance and were given crowns and a ceremonial first dance.

Lady and the Tramp, seniors Jeremy Stolsig and Megan Benneth compete in the Licorice Relay noon activity. Each partner took an end of the licorice rope in their mouth and chewed until it was gone, showing the judges their empty mouths. Photo by Sara Tracy

Dances Showing Off Our Steps

Dances created the perfect time for socializing with all of your best friends from school. As well as getting a chance to hang out with all of your friends, students got a chance to listen to great music, dance with the cute boy or girl from science class, and congratulate the athletes on the great plays of the game as most of the dances were held after football and basketball games in the fall. The leadership classes organized all of the aftergame dances, and various clubs hosted the dances and prospered from the money raised.

Dance to the sounds of great music. senior Cody Donahue grooves to the music at the Homecoming dance. Donahue was a nominee for Homecoming King, voted on by his fellow students. With the option of coming as you were, semi-formal, or dressing up 50's style, the attire at the dance was a fascinating sight. Photo by Sara Tracy

Time out, seniors Marilia Assis, John Kearns, Jana Atchley, and Claudia Weitzel take a break from the dance floor and sit one out "I liked the Homecoming dance because I like to dance, and I missed it a lot; in Germany kids dance every weekend. It's also nice the way that all the kids seem to enjoy all the same kinds of music. The music here is different than in Germany, but I like it for the most part,' commented Weitzel, a foreign exchangestudent from Germany. Photo by Sara Tracy

Lost in the music, juniors Joseph Carter, Anita Thompson, and Scott Stewart keep up with the music and the crowd as the song changes. "I like dances because it's a school sponsored event where you can socialize with people who you wouldn't necessarily otherwise," commented Thompson. Photo by Sara Tracy

Turn up the heat, sophomore Andrew Wimer gets lost in the crowd as the crowd dances to a fast song. The music at the dance varied from pop to country to alternative to oldies, tossing in a few slow dances and great dance hits. Many students enjoyed fast music they could dance to. Photo by Sara Tracy

Honored princess, senior Homecoming princess Molly Kirks strolls through the after game dance. "I felt being able to be on Homecoming Court was such a privilege. It was the first court that I was on and the whole experience was wonderful. I liked being in the pep assembly and just everyone knowing who I was when I came down to the floor," commented Kirks. Photo by Sara Tracy

Step by Step

It is not the T.V. show. It is life. We have no scripts, no makeup artists, and no rewind buttons. We only have one chance to live our lives and make them a memorable existance.

People

s we wandered aimlessly through the halls on any given day, we walked by hundreds of people, all of them with a full life and an interesting story. With almost 1,400 students we were lucky if we could get to know half of them. Jeni Ulm related this story about someone who made a difference in her life. "He isn't rich. That's just his name, Richard Geil. This small boy with a huge heart is who I've decided is the person I admire the most in the entire world. Richard is the kind of boy who can tell what you're feeling by simply looking at your eyes.

Perception and sensitivity are his greatest qualities. He is full of talent. He can play bass just like Flea from the Red Hot Chili Peppers. Richard is the one person I know I can always count on. He is reliable and strong willed. He doesn't care what other people think of him. He knows that beauty is a soft hug and a good song; he's my favorite person."

Geil was one of the students who touched the heart of someone around him giving his friendship.

We spent most of our teen years with the same crowd, all of them helping to make us the people we are and the people we hope to become. Whether we know it or not, everyone of us has had a positive effect on someone we may or may not know.

In the following pages, you will find the faces of students, staff, and teachers who have had the chance to make our lives brighter by just being themselves. As students, we cherished our time, not only with friends, but with people who we could learn from and have fun with.

Caught in the act, senior Tyler Plagmann is seen by classmates seniors David Villeneuve and Alex Burke while he jokingly reaches for the fire alarm. Unfortunately, fires and even bomb threats were no joke this year. During the fire drill, we spent an hour outside while the school was checked out and once again made "safe;" luckily it was sunny. We weren't so lucky during the bomb threat. With the rain pouring down as we walked across the football field, we found shelter in the grandstands. Huddling close together to keep warm, we enjoyed the "Go Warriors" chant that principal Kenneth Woody organized for us. Photo by Carla Corbitt Comfortably seated, the old, hardwood senior benches are no longer being used. With the help of senior Logan Bennett senior, Phil Utter gets a comfortable seat as he rests during break. Most of us are not so lucky. A memorable moment for Utter this year was becoming President of wood shop. "I have always wanted to be president of Wood Shop and now I am," commented Utter. "The most memorable moment in high school was when all the Juniors danced to Jackson Five during one of the pep assembly for a dance competition," recalled Bennett. Thejuniors also won that competition. Photo by Natalie Barba

Read between the lines, During break, many things happened, socializing with friends, making phone calls and enjoying one of Americas favorite authors, Dr. Suess. "My favorite thing to do during break is to read Dr. Seuss," stated Senior Zach Shanholtzer. Sitting along side Shanholtzer is senior Alyssa Winningham who unlike Shanholtzer prefers to socialize with friends during break. Another favorite pastime for students was buying food. To get the most from your money many students hungout in Jim Vandehey's room where he sold everything from chocolate muffins and candy bars to fruity Airheads, Jolly Ranchers and Nerds. Vandehey also sold a variety of soft drinks, sodas and water. Photo by April Sliker

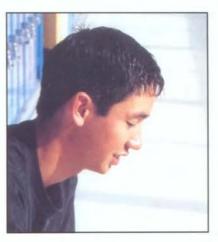

"What's your opportunity cost?", these words will forever haunt every senior's ears whether it came from Economics teachers Jennifer Cowen or "no essay questions on tests during football season" Brad Bauer. During Cowen's Advanced Economics class, seniors brought in an object worth a dollar, put it in a bag, then traded it with another student to see if the trade was worth the economic value. Seniors J.J. Stolsig, Doug Alley, Kory Ray and David Libby were just a few of the seniors who participated in the trading game. Photo by April Sliker

When I look back at myself in ten years, I'll laugh at myself for wearing... "On Valentines Day a couple years ago, I wore a pink sweatsuit to school. I'll never knowwhat I was thinking!" said Senior Meaghan Schroeder. Photo by Natalie Barba

At the game, I...

"like watching the game, but when we're losing, socializing is more fun. So I go for a little of both," said senior Kevin Fantus. Photo by April Sliker

Friday nights I ...

"hang out with Alyssa Winningham, Johnny Ayala and Jenny Elder, and we watch movies. The funniest one we saw would have to be Me, Myself, and Irene. We laughed long hours about the chicken part," said senior Stephanie Mose. Photo by April Sliker.

When not in school, I...

"ride my 4-wheeler to the dunes and hang out with friends. Sometimes, I'll stay home and sleep all day. Nights I go out cruising in Albany and Salem with friends," said senior Kyle Alley. Photo by April Sliker

My week consists of ...

"going to school and practicing cheerleading every Tuesday and Thursday. Then on the other days, I work late. It's easy for me because I'm always organized and love to be busy. I plan on being a detective or lawyer in the future," senior Brandy Sevier. Photo by April Silker Jason Adamson Joseph Adkins Douglas Alley Kyle Alley

Class of 2002

Three of a different kind, juniors Matt Swanson, Paul Walker, and Joseph Carter strike up a classical Charlie's Angel pose inbetween scenes of The Would-be Gentleman, the fall play. "High school is a lot like climbing a mountain. Being a junior, 1 am almost at the top, but there are still a bunch of little rocks to step over," commented Walker. Photo by Sara Tracy

Quite the catch, juniors Brittney Ellefson and Summer Ullrich fish for creepycrawlies in the river on the zoology salmon run field trip taken this fall. Lynden Brown takes all the Zoology students on this trip to see the salmon spawning and to discover the other small creatures living in the Santiam River. Photo courtesy of Lynden Brown

Luggage for the trunk, Doug Pickles prepares to feed an elephant at Wildlife Safari as others look on and wait their turn. The Wildlife Safari trip is put on for Lyden Brown's Zoology class. This year, she took two trips due to the change to the A/B schedule. Brown commented that this is how teaching should be. Smaller groups that can get more hands on, hour lunches, and more time to see and do things that there just wasn't time for with the usual groups. Photo courtesy of Lynden Brown

In high spirts, "What can I say? The girls played better football than the guys and the guys looked better in the skirts," commented junior Ian Smiley. Powderpuff was a good way for members of both sexes to see what it was like to "walk" in the others shoes. The girls ran up and down the field throwing the ball around while the guys got to wear skirts, jump around, and flaunt themselves to the crowd. Photo by Sara Tracy

Junior Relationships

Eyes only for you, juniors Scott Stewart and Anita Thompson pose for a quick picture. Stewart asked Thompson out through the school newspaper. "When I first saw Anita in Lebanon, she was flirting with this other guy. Being the nonchalant type of guy that I am, I went over and sat in her lap. Then I looked into her eyes and fell in love." This year, Stewart had a humor column in the high school newspaper 'Humor for the Insomniac. "I took advantage of my journalistic rights and asked Anita out in the paper." Stewart continued. "I pulled her out of class, saying that she had to have an interview for yearbook. Then I asked her if she had read my column and handed her the paper. 'So, um, Anita Thompson, will you go out with me?' was highlighted. Anita turned red, said yes and headed back to her class. Apparently, me asking her out in the newspaper was the most romantic thing that has happened to Anita." Photo by Crystal Schulte

Ten miserable breakup lines

10. We're too different.

9. I'm sorry, We're moving.

8. I met someone else on the internet.

7. I just don't have time to deal with you and your five other personalites.

6. I just can't breathe.

5. You're too much like my mom.

4. I just don't have time for any of this.

8. "I feel different about you." "How?" "I don't know."

2. Our pharamones just aren't compatable.

THE WORST BREAKUP LINE.....

1. My shrink thinks you're a bad influence on me.

Best of friends, juniors Krisitin Giddings, Linzi Stolsig, and Lesley Stiffler have been friends since kindergarten. "It's always nice to have two really close friends you can count on and trust. We love to cruise in the 'storm.' We have many embarrassing moments that we'll always look back on," stated Giddings about Stolsig and Stiffler. In their spare time the girls enjoy spying on their guy friends. Photo by Natalie Barba True dedication, juniors Jasmine Winchel and Travis Hood have been dating since January of 2000. "Jasmine is the best thing that has ever happened to me. She is my best friend; I love spending time with her. I can't picture my life without her," stated Hood. Photo by Crystal Schulte

Too cute, "It all started when Doug called me one weekend, and I wasn't home. Valentine's Day was on Monday and he sent me roses. Soon after, we started calling each other and hanging out. On March 7th, he asked me out. Doug is one of the sweetest and nicest people I've ever met, and I hope we stay together forever," said junior Jenny Duerr about boyfriend, junior Doug Pickles. Pickles said, "We have shared a lot of special times together, and I love her to death." Photo by Natalie Barba

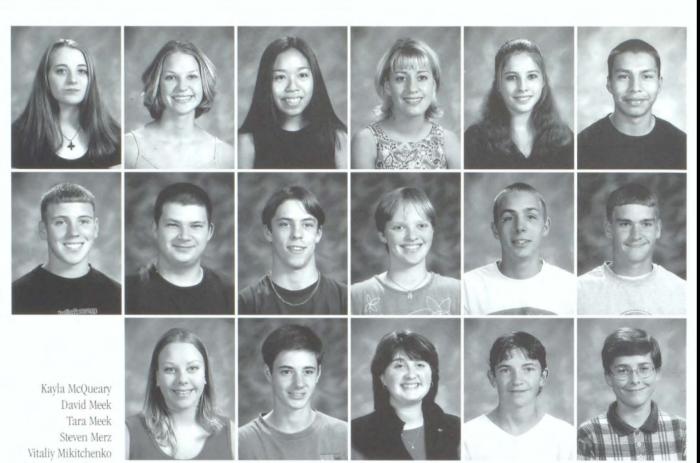

Closer than ever, juniors Michelle Bertalot and Jon Steinhebel have been dating since February tenth, 2000. "Michellewasthe girlin Spanish class who always stolerny hat, but now she's so much more," stated Steinhebel. "Jon's been there a lot forme this last year. Best friends, Kristyn Trumble and Corrie Belveal have been friends since middle school. "In the sixth grade we hated each other, but through mutual friends we started hanging out and became inseperable. I remember when Kristyn almost broke my neck by throwing me off the jet ski at 50 mph," stated Corrie Belveal. "One time I made Corrie laugh so hard she peed her pants three times," remembers Trumble. Photo by Carla Corbitt

Crash test, freshmen Johanna McHenry and Katie Lindstrom explain thier most embarrassing moment together. "One summer when we were at Sunriver on a nice sunny day, we were riding our bikes along the bike path when we spotted two cute guys also riding bikes. We started waving, then all of a sudden, we both lost control and crashed into a nearby pond. It was humilitating." Photo by Sarah Tracy

10 miserable breakup lines

10. Let's just be friends.

9. This thing between us just isn't working out.

8. You're hands are too cold.

7. Your best friend is cuter.

6. We don't act like a couple.

5. You Just aren't my type.

4. You're more like my brother/sister.

8. I can't date you anymore because my mom doesn't like you.

2. I have to keep my options open. You never know what senior will look my way.

THE WORST BREAKUP LINE...

I. I just can't handle your feet.

Eye to eye, "I met Teri at the home varsity game against Corvallis. At the time we didn't know each other very well. A friend introduced us to each other, and I fell in love with her," remarked freshman Cooper Huffman about girlfriend Teri Rush. Tip to tip, making sure they are a good distance apart, entering freshmen and LINK crew members prepare to give out high fives to each other in a spirit building activity. The LINK crew played a major role in acquainting the new members of LHS with their fresh surroundings. The LINK crew members were put in pairs and given a group of students. Guiders of the New Footsteps

Biology, Career explorations, Anatomy and Physiology all have one thing in common, they are all taught by Terry Deacon. Deacon spent his youth and the beginning of his teaching career in Hawaii. When not teaching, Deacon enjoys coaching and working out. Whether he's lifting weights, running, kayacking or snow shoeing, Deacon likes to do physical activities in his spare time. "My high school experience was incredible, and I hated graduating. I went to a college prep school called Punahou, which was founded in 1841 by mis-

No skeletons in Terry Deacon's closet, no human skeletons at least; you may find the bones of a cat though. The lovely fragrance of dissected cats filled the halls as the Anatomy and Physiology classes used their trained hands to carefully slice through the layers of innards. Female cats were added to this years dissection, some of which were pregnant. Photo by Sara Tracy sionaries to the Hawaiians. The campus is situated on 76 acres in Manoa Valley, several miles inland from Waikiki Beach. We experienced great success on the athletic fields and in the classrooms. 99 percent of our class went on to four year universities around the U.S. mainland. Our track team was undefeated in dual meets for 25 years, and we won the state title three years in a row while I was there. I won the league title in the high jump and pole vault my junior and senior years and was a state champion in the pole vault. After school, we would go mud sliding down grassy banks on rainy days, body and board surfing on sunny days, and always spent our weekends at the beach playing sand volleyball, sun bathing, paddling out rigger canoes in the waves, or sailing Hobie Cats. We had a number of dances in which couples gave each other fragrant, flower leis to wear that made everything smell tropical. Every month various ethnic celebrations were held in which everyone came together to enjoy the food, music, dancing, and costumes'' remarked Deacon.

With pride, "The tribute that I would pay to those I knew who died would not be one of sadness and regret, but of heroics and honor." When Kerry Wells spoke at the Veterans Day assembly in rememberance, specifically of his experiences in Vietnam, he spoke of helicoptors flying overhead and how everyone involved was a hero, not just the people in combat, but also the people aiding these soldiers. Getting letters, supplies, and medical attention to the soldiers were just a few of the things that people did, not just fighting, in the war. Photo by Sara Tracy

Guess Who? Our Teachers... When They Were Students

People are often told that if they want to know what they're going to look like when they're older that they should look to their parents. So if we want to know what our significant other is going to look like in twenty years, we just have to look at their mom and dad. Sometimes we want to know what adults look like when they were our age, but unless they have children of their own it's hard to tell. So, in order to find out what our teachers looked like in high school, we obtained photos of eight of them as they were their senior year. Key beside photos

Collaborating over lunch, Marsha Ray and Paula Freeman taught photography this year. Ray and Freeman ate lunch together almost everyday in Freeman's room. A really great aspect about our school was the friendliness of our teachers, whether to their students or to each other. Photo by Sara Tracy

Quite the experience, zoology teacher Lynden Brown gets friendly with an elephant on a class field trip to Wildlife Safari. "I love elephants! Nothing beats getting up close and personal for learning. Field experience is one of the best ways to really understand what we've been studying in the classroom," stated Lynden Brown. At Wildlife Safari, students, teachers and parents get the opportunity to see exotic animals that aren't in our everyday life. Foot In The Game

Being a Warrior involves a lot more than just books and pencils. Either being a spectator or actually playing the game, sports are an inevitable part of a high school students life.

s they rush on the field looking to the crowd they wait in silent anticipation

Sports

The game is about to begin victory only favors one the determination is apparent on their face

In the first second of the game, like a shot the Warriors charge the fight has now begun

The crowd falls silent and the Warriors line up like a shot, they charge forth

The turn of events drives life from the crowd who breathe as one watching the tension build

Shouts and cheers cascade from the air as the Warriors strive toward victory

Staring at one another they feed off each others ambitions each knowing that victory only favors one

The audience inhales, anticipating while their Warriors fight leaving their heart on the field

The crowd's one voice answers the buzzer exalting their triumph acknowledging the efforts made

With the crowd having left a weary Warrior stands before a torn field thankful that tonight—victory favored them. Poem by Scott Crowell's Writers Workshop class. Finishing touches by Carla Corbitt

On the line, Lebanon's linemen play their best against Corvallis. "Our team was great this year; we just came up short somehow. This was the best year of football ever thanks to the offensive line and the rest of the team." stated Donald Holt, a four year Lebanon football player. Photo by Sara Tracy

Path to victory, senior Jim Fitzwater outruns an opposing Corvallis player. "This was my first year and I really enjoyed playing. I wish I would of started playing a couple years earlier now," commented Fitzwater on the year. Photo by Sara Tracy It's all in the foot, senior Patrick McQuistan starts off the game with a kick. This was McQuistan's first year as the kicker for the Warriors. "Even though I kick goofy footed, it was easy because our special teams were good," remarked McQuistan. Photo by Sara Tracy

On the ground, Lebanon's defensive linemen tackle a Corvallis running back. "This year's Warrior football team had a tremendous work ethic and an outstanding attitude, despite some unfortunate injuries and close losses that could have gone either way. They showed great integrity and a competitive spirit to the end of the season," stated varsity football coach Brad Bauer. Photo by Sara Tracy

Make the play, junior Carl Woeck hussles to help out his teammates. Woeck was one of the few juniors that strictly played varsity. "Football is on a rise. Each year we are getting better. Next year will be the best yet," commented Woeck, a linemen. Photo by Sara Tracy

It's all you, senior Dominic Olvera catches yet another pass for the Warriors. Olvera earned an all-league honorable mention for safety. "We spent many hours together on and off the field. I look at many players as heroes and friends. Football consists of many great times I've enjoyed in life. I'm glad I spent it with the people I did. Thanks for the support," reflected Olvera over the last four years he has played football. Photo by Sara Tracy

With anticipation, the senior girls wait for their turn on the field. While most powder puff teams don't take the game seriously, both the senior and junior teams practiced very early in the morning in the rain and with actual football coaches for about a month. Photo by Sara Tracy

"My most memorable time this year was when Jake Solberg caught the football and made the winning touchdown because he is the first lineman," remarked freshman BJ Gilbert. Photo by Kelsey Reynolds

"My most memorable time this year was when we lost to Sprague. Even though we lost, it was a learning experience, and they were the only team who beat us," commented freshman Ben Tacy. Photo by Kelsey Reynolds

Lebanon has a history of having an awesome freshman football team, and this year the legend lived on. The freshman football team had a very successful season, only losing one game against Sprague. "While we were playing defense during the South Albany game, I came through the line while the quarterback on South's team was fumbling the ball. I hit the ball up and the other defensive end, Phillip Right, caught the ball and ran for the touch down," said freshman Joe Andrews. This is just one of the many successful stories the freshman team have to tell. When Greg Otta broke the other team's quarterback's collar bone or making the winning touchdown, the freshman football team have great memories of this year, thanks to their teammates and great coaches.

With a dodge away from the opponent, sophomore Joel Delgado uses a sidekick to get the ball past his opponent. As his first year on the varsity team, Delgado also played goalie. "This was a rebuilding season for our team; we lost nine starters from the season before, but we did end with a successful year," commented Delgado. Photo by Sara Tracy

Teamwork, the men's varsity soccer team usually warmed up before their games. They knew to work as hard at practice as they would at their real game because how you practice is how you perform. Photo by Sara Tracy

With a strong kick, sophomore JJ Macedo takes a free shot at the goal. "My most memorable thing this season was being with all my friends on the team. Another one was when we beat South Albany, even though I have five or six friends on that team, it was a good feeling to win," commented Mecedo. Photo by Sara Tracy

With anticipation, junior Ray Ebbs drives the ball towards the goal. As a first year varsity member, Ebbs showed a lot of improvement throughout the season. "This year we had a lot of new people which made the season a little difficult, but next year, we will have a lot of return members so it will be a little easier." remarked Ebbs. Photo by Sara Tracy

With a clear kick, senior Shoni Plagmann uses her smooth moves to get the ball by the opponent. "I have had a great fouryears, and this year our team was awesome, especially Laura Mackie who helped a lot on our defensive side. Thanks to all the other girls who made this season a great one, "remarked Plagmann. Photo by Natalic Barba

Photo by Natalie Barba Ahead of her opponent, senior Chelsea Schumacher dribbles the ball to safety. "My most memorable moment this season was on the bus ride home from our last away game. All of the senior girls were in the back of the bus, and for the first time our coach was with us; we were all just talking about the past and the future. We also discussed eyebrows a lot," commented Schumacher. Photo by Sara Tracy

A fight for the ball, senior Katie Wopat struggles to keep the ball away from the opponent. "I've had a really good time on soccer these four years. We've come a long way, and we've become a lot closer," remarked Wopat. Photo by Natalie Barba

Race for success, the JV women race against the opponents to make a goal. Many seniors report that Lebanon's soccer program has increased in talent a lot through the years. Photo by Natalie Barba

Eager to score, senior Maria Gonzalez heads for the goal. "I'm going to miss the soccer team because I met special people; people that you don't find in Colombia, people who and understand me and understand my position. I had a lot of fun, and I learned the soccer of the U.S.," remarked Gonzalez. One step ahead of the opponent, freshman Nick Naegeli takes the ball to the goal. "I had a lot of fun this soccer season because 1 made a lot of new friends. Even though we lost all our games but two, which we tied, I can't wait until next season," said Naegeli. Photo by Sara Tracy

With a high kick in the air, junior Joseph Carter kicks the ball as far away from the goal as he can. "Soccer was a great experience for our team this year. We met a lot of new people, and I had the opportunity to be the keeper for the first time. I want to thank my teammates for being so fun to be around, and I hope to see all of you on varsity next year." remarked Carter. Photo by Sara Tracy

Run your heart out, junior Timisha Dorland, a varsity runner, strives to beat her personal best at Waterloo Park during one of their first races. "Cross country was great because the team was so close, and we all worked very hard. The most memorable race was at Silver Creek Falls when there was a bees nest in the course, and people were getting stung," commented Dorland. Photo by Sara Tracy

With determination, junior Toby Lindstrom endeavors for a better personal time. Lindstrom was on the JV cross country team this year. "Toby always ran very strong. He always ran his best in practice and gave his all," Courtney Crocker, a fellow teammate, commented about Lindstrom. Photo by Carla Corbitt Deep breaths, junior Sara Haines keeps her head up as she runs through the woods. "Cross country was awesome this year! We had a great season in spite of running into bees at one meet, and Andy Benneth regularly leaving his uniform in his sister's car," remarked Haines. Breathing is very important for a successful cross country runner. A steady intake of breath gets oxygen correctly to the rest of the body and the brain. Photo by Sara Tracy

Steadily, senior Shane Gunnet runs his heart out at one of the first cross country races of the year at Waterloo Park. "Cross country is what you make it. If you like it, you like it. If you don't, you don't. But whatever cross country is, it stays with you. It stayed with me, and I'll always remember it," stated Gunnet. Photo by Sara Tracy

Steady pace, freshman Amie Hensley tries her hardest to make a new personal record. "The funniest thing that happened during cross country was the day we ran clear out to the fish ladder, and I had to go to the bathroom so bad that I ran back to Burger King. The best moment of the season was when I got my best time 23:32 minutes," commented Hensley. Photo by Sara Tracy

Best foot forward, sophomore Micah Cabrera competes for the JV cross country team at a home meet. "During one of the home meets Brian Thompson was recording the boy's varsity runners time. He kept telling Tom McKellar that he was in third place when there were actually 15 people directly ahead of him. About the third time Brian told him this throughout the course of the race, we caught Tom's reaction on tape," quoted Cabrera. Photo by Carla Corbitt

Team work, senior's Julie Anderson and Rachael Ellis work together on the girl's water polo team. The team was made up of seven girls. The members included Anderson, Ellis, Sheena Pullen, Jenna Cady, Lori Harding, Callie Bennett, and Missy Buchheit. The team won two matches against Sprague and Albany. The leading team scorer and Most Valuable Player was Anderson. Harding was voted by her teammates as the most improved. Photo by Brenna Zedan

Round 'em up, junior Carla Estes team pens a cow along with sophomore Hilary Karr. Estes and Karr have been members of the Equestrian team for two years. "This year has been busy. We have both returning and new members, all of whom are doing great and are hoping to qualify for state," remarked junior Rachael Broderick, a three year member. Photo courtesy of Carla Estes

Ripples In The Water

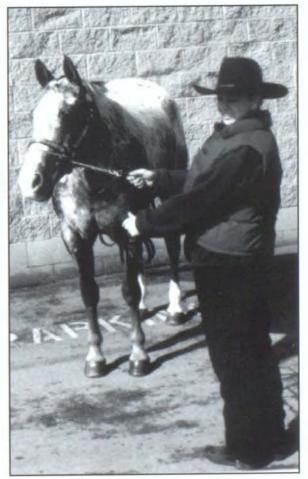

Go for the goal, senior Chad Hanson competes in the last water polo game of the season. Hanson led the team in scoring with 30 goals. "Even though we only had two wins at the end of the season, we really came together. At our last game in North Eugene, David Johnson got ejected and we were down by eight, but we pulled together and came all the way back to lose only by five. Through it all, it was a good season," stated Hanson. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

With determination, senior JJ Stolsig moves past his opponent. "This was a great season; we won our first home game in two years, and I had a lot of fun with all the guys, and I will really miss all of them. Good luck in the future," remarked Stolsig. Stolsig has played with the Warriors a total of four years. Photo by Sarah Jones

We were always close; we just didn't have the killer instinct it takes to win. We improved every day more and more, and it won't be long until we will have the confidence we need to win our games," remarked Jantzi. Photo by Sarah Jones

Two more, sophomore Zach Hagemiester adds two to the score, and he'll be an asset to the basketball team for two more years. "This season for me was a good experience. I know what the competition is going to be like for the next few years. Mark my words, I'll be back," remarked Hagemiester. Photo by Sarah Jones

Double teamed, junior Ian Smiley attempts to put it up for two. "Our coach came into a rough situation, but he believed in us and having that made a huge difference. In the beginning of the season, we had a tough schedule, but we played well and unfortunately fell a little short. Coach never gave up, so neither could we." Photo by Sarah Jones

Set to shoot, senior Dominic Olvera concentrates on his shot. "This year has been very fun and at the same time a new experience. We are on our third coach in three years, but everything is starting to come together. Our coach is great, and he always believes in us. With his attitude, we should accomplish a lot of things this year and in the future," said Olvera. Photo by Sarah Jones

Up and out of reach, junior Andy Pointer looks for an open player to pass the ball to. "This season was very good because we have a good group of seniors; they have good leadership skills. Our coaches have always believed in us, even when we were struggling, which is important for a successful year. We have had some very close games with very good teams," commented Pointer. Dangerous dribbler, sophomore Caylan VandenBos runs past the opposing team. "Basketball has been somewhat exciting being on the great Varsity team. We may not have won every game like we planned to, but it's okay. We're all tight, and I have become good friends with the star point guard-she's a cool chick. I can't wait for next year and the things that will happen for our team. that will be two years together," remarked VandenBos. Photo by Sarah Jones

Look for the pass, senior Chelsea Schumacher passes the ball to a teammate. "We had a great time teasing Lesley about wearing the wrong color jersey and tripping on her warm up pants; Caylan chucking the ball in a girls face and lots of other stuff. We continued to have a very fun season! Keep smiling, Lesley!" Stated Schumacher. Photo by Sarah Jones

One for the team, freshmen Jodee Wilson shoots a free throw for her team. "I learned a lot this year and it was a great stepping stone for next year because we're only losing two seniors," stated Wilson. Photo by Sarah Jones

Pull together, Lady Warrior's sophomore Caylan VandenBos and junior Natalie Chase worked together to get the ball back. This was a building year for the Warriors as they only had a couple of returning players. They will only be losing two seniors this year, hopefully making the team stronger next year. Photo by Sarah Aitkin

Longshot, juniorstar Kellie Griner shoots a three. "This year has been so much fun! I feel that everyone is one big family. Even though we didn't win that many games, we always played our hearts out. It was so much fun to go explore other schools with Cavlan. South Salem has been the best so far! I don't miss anything about last year, but I will miss the seniors this year! I feel that this year was just a building year, and next season we will show everyone what we are made of." commented Griner. Photo by Sarah Jones

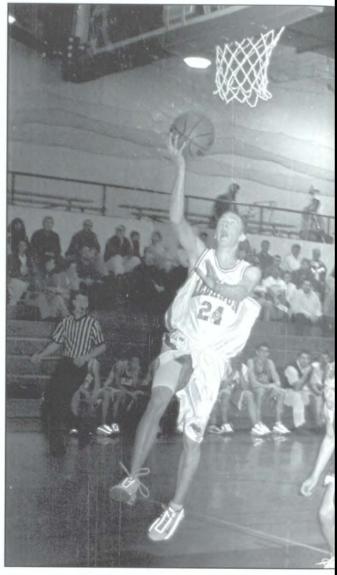

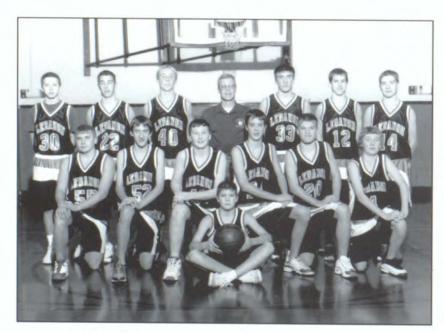

Leap into the air, Nick Swanson makes the jump shot against their opponents. "We had a great year. It was a lot of fun with Coach Cash. It's too bad this is his last year, but we sent him out with a bang. There were a lot of sophomores who stepped up and played well for us," remarked Swanson. Photo by Sarah Jones

Triumph above all, junior Brady Hallock dives for the ball with determination. "We started off strong, but then we lost a few games. Hopefully, the junior guys will step up and lead us through victory throughout the rest of the year. We had a really strange coach. and somehow he was able to stick with us this year. I'd like to wish Coach Cash a happy and forever long retirement," said Hallock. Photo by Sarah Jones

Eyes wide open, sophomore Laura Mackie searches for an open player to pass the ball to. "Basketball was a lot of fun this year because I am on a team with a bunch of friends. We all have a lot of fun but know how to get serious on the court. Our coaches are a blast, with one of them earning the name of "Tom Green" because of his humor. All in all, this was a very encouraging season," commented Mackie. Photo by Sarah Jones

With aggression, freshman Katie Atchley guards her opponent. "My favorite thing about basketball is the team and our coach. This year we have a coach who has taught us a lot of new things. We have improved so much as a team and as individuals. Our game against Sprague was our best game, our defence was really good, and we shut Sprague down. We had a lot of fun, and I hope we continue to improve and win," remarked Atchley. Photo by Sarah Jones

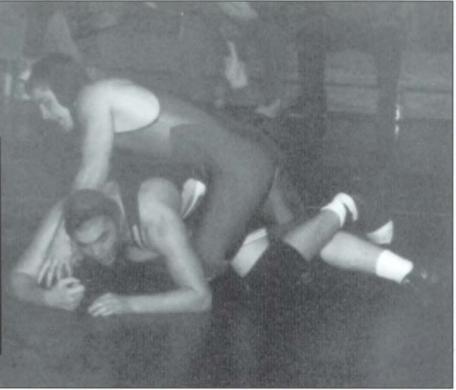

Up the court, freshman Sarah Aikin looks for an open teammate to make the move. "We practice hard and try our best, and we've improved a lot. We love to win, but when we don't we learn from our weaknesses. I love playing away games because when we travel together, we get to know each other better and grow closer. Home games are fun because we get a lot of support and home court advantage," said Aikin. Photo by Sara Tracy

Determined, senior Tate Page, wrestling at 130, holds down his opponent. "I think this year has been a learning experience for us all. The coaches are there to keep us in line, and we're here to test the limits of the coaches. Overall, we learn from each other. This year has been especially great for the seniors because we have the ability to break in the freshmen," remarked Page. Photo by Sarah Jones

Pinned down, senior Jason Burr holds down his North Salem opponent. Burr placed second place in the Del Norte tournament in California. "We are starting to become more of a team instead of individuals," commented Burr. Photo courtesy of Shoni Plagmann

Hold on, sophomore Micah Cabrera keeps a tight grip on his opponent. "This year we have more evenly distributed expertice among the wrestlers. Last year we had a few good wrestlers and some weaker ones. Over all, I think this has been a transition year between a weak team and a championship team," commented Cabrera. Photo by Sarah Jones

Face forward, senior Chad Hanson dives into the pool as fans cheer him on. "I wasn't looking forward to morning swimming practices or long workouts but so far we're 2-0. I hope that all the early morning practices keep paying off. We're mostly winning though because we have a great coach— with a great coach, you get great wins," stated Hanson. Photo by Sara Tracy

Keep your head up, sophomore Stephanie Broyles glides through the water. This was Broyles first year on the swim team. "I really enjoyed swimming the breast stroke. Iplan on swimming again next year," stated Broyles. Photo by Saah Jones

One last look, senior co-captain John Soltau prepares himself for a race. "We're a young team that has achieved more than we ever hoped for. Thanks to great captaining skills from Hallie and Rachel.," commented Soltau on the season. Photo by Sara Tracy

Deep breath, junior Kristina Aikin competes in one of Lebanon's home swim meets. "Endless flip turns. Long-lasting chlorine smells. Leaky goggles that get foggy. Dodging people that are swimming right at you and getting extremely hot and thirsty, while swimming in an entire pool of water! Being on the swim team is quite an experience. Some people may think of swimming as a non-contact sport. Actually, a great deal of contact is involved. I often get kicked in the side, or end up getting my arms tangled with other peoples. My best memory of swim team is when all the girls slide around on the soapy floors. I really appreciate how supportive people are," commented Aikin on the year. Photo by Sarah Jones In the spotlight, junior Angie Brink preps for her turn. "Dance team has probably been one of the best parts of high school for me, and it will probably be something I will always remember," commented Brink. STEPS OF OPPORTUNITY AND CHALLENGE

Just being a student was easy, it was those who took it upon themselves to improve our school by way of their involvement in clubs and activities that made LHS what it was.

rom the second you enter this building as a freshman, the phrase "Get involved" was reiterated so many times that it soon became the mantra that you repeated to yourself when spirits were low and your calender was clear. We were fortunate enough to have many groups that offered enrollment and participation with open arms. Whether you enjoyed volunteering your time with Key club, releasing your creative side on stage through drama's plays, or learning to make more money in DECA, there was a club for you. Not only did your participation help you stand out in the crowd when filling out applications for college, but they helped to build relationships with other students during your four years here.

Along with LHS's long list of clubs and activities to involve yourself with, many students found themselves immersed in their classes. From photography to introduction to law, there was an elective for every area you could possibly be involved in.

Knowledge is so much more than reading, writing and arithmetic. The more you learn today, the easier doors will open for you tomorrow. By making the most of your time here, you are not only bettering your future, but that of your children.

Although we had been working towards overcoming financial difficulties, LHS decided that cutting the arts wouldn't solve the problem. The outcome left Lebanon leading the state with strong art programs and one of the only auto tech and welding programs in the state.

ASB (Associated Student Body) members were voted into office at the end of last year. At the beginning of the school year, they decided to join together with Wells Fargo Bank to raise money. Wells Fargo matched the money that the school raised, and raised $2000. Another big project that the ASB took on was at Christmas; they raised money for food baskets. The Lebanon community, LHS, families, and businesses joined together to exceed the goal of 80 food baskets. The community raised over $2000 for this project also! Fore's Shop 'n Kart helped out by giving ASB a deal on the food baskets. The baskets were put together and passed out to the needy families around town by the ASB and senate members. The ASB decided to have senate meetings before school hoping that dedicated members would show up. Last year, the meetings were during class. A lot of people showed up, but less was accomplished. This year there were less people, yet more dedication.

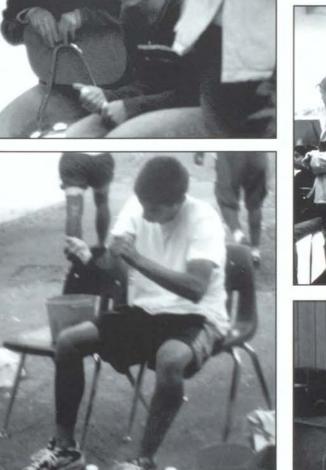

Order, senior President Megan Benneth discusses fund raisers with the senate at a meeting. "ASB was definitely a challenge. We accomplished so much that we never believed we could. It was good to change ASB's reputation from leadership-postermaking-slackers to hard working people known by the community. All in all, the nine of us grew so close through all our hard work," commented Benneth. Photo by Sara Tracy Listen closely, senior Lindsey Scofield, juniors Sarah Aitkin. Pam Leibrant. Many people looked forward to pep assemblies this year. The ability to get out of class early in order to yell and scream for 30 minutes, and to celebrate successes at all sorts of competitions whether it be on the playing field or through a club like forensics. This year's pep assemblies were where the students got comfortable with the new administration the first week of school while watching them try to beat the ASB in a relay, where princess' and princes for courts were recognized and where the dance team amazed us with their body roll. Leadership was also in charge of decorating for Mr. LHS, organizing noon activities and assisting the ASB in their holiday coin drive to benefit area families.

The meeting starts as the members each introduce themselves to encourage a more connected group. Announcements consisted of the 30 hour famine through World Vision, a Christian relief organization to benefit those who don't have the food that we all too often take for granted. Another project that Generation Life was in charge of was organizing True Love Waits in February, a program aimed at making a commitment to a sexually abstinent lifestyle until a Biblical marriage is entered. Generation Life is a nondenominational organization that goes beyond Bible study to be an outreach based program.

Preach to the masses, Senior President Rachel Leach leads the announcement portion of the meeting before the members break into small discussion groups. Secretary Elisha Mullenix assists with leading the meeting in the absence of Vice President Melissa Bybee. "Our motto is to preach the gospel at all times, and if necessary, use words," stated Leach. The children sattaller in their chairs as the S.T.A.R.S. leaders walked into the room. Beginning with introductions, the students got familiarized themselves with the session leaders who they would meet with for the next five weeks. Besides learning about the consequences of sex, the students learned the positives that abstinence awards, along with efficient refusal skills and tips to become aware of how the media influences people's decisions. Juniors Joel West, and Jessica Homer along with senior Matt Castro practiced presenting the guidelines. Peer Mediation

When: November 16, 2000 Where: First United Methodist Church

Along with the addition of Gerry Rizza to the staff of administration, we also gained peer mediation which he advises. A two day training prepared the student volunteers to deal with "every possible situation," stated senior Leah Chisholm, one of 21 mediators, "it gets me involved in something positive." Along with peer mediation comes the much needed skill of knowing what questions will produce the best responses. Members learned how to steer clear of questions that could be answered with a simple yes or no, and strive to enable the person to express what they are truly feeling. "If something happened in the past, then because of confidentiality issues we can not say anything. The only time we can inform others of what was said are if possible harm could be inflicted on someone," commented Chisholm.

Sleeping beauties, seniors Kelsey Reynolds and Crystal Schulte caught catching some Zs instead of finishing their pages on paste up night. Schulte commented, "Kelsey and I have been great friends for seven years, and yearbook has brought us closer together. earbook is your life

When: 7th & 8th period

Where: Room 70 Sandra Graham's Classroom

"Please say the cross country pictures turned out!" "Newspaper! Staff meeting at the round table." "Has anybody seen my story notes?"

The Publication's classroom (ie: Yearbook and Newspaper) is always busy with people working everywhere. Photographers in the darkroom, editors at the i-Macs blocking out the noise with the help of headphones and a Red Hot Chili Pepper's CD, reporters conducting interviews with outside students at tables. Constantly facing deadlines, you'll never see someone falling asleep at their desk or lazily discussing their weekend plans. We bypassed the possible problems that the A/B could have caused with our hectic schedule by having class the last period everyday, but one major change has been combining Newspaper and Yearbook. Forced to overcome any underlying perfectionistic rivalry, we merged in the name of publications and learned to prosper and become successful together.

Being able to have a lasting impact on a major keepsake, such as the yearbook, instills pride in its designers, but the Newspaper has a new claim to fame also. The National Scholastic Press Association awarded The Warrior Spirit as a first class newspaper with three out of four marks of distinction. "The award came about because of the staff's hard work; we are very honored," remarked the Newspaper's editor-in-chief Cody Donahue.

In deep thought, junior Scott Stewart sits and types on a Macintosh computer in the publication room. "Yeah, I like the newspaper because I used it to ask a girl out. I was writing a column about relationships and how hard a guy works to ask a girl out. What a better idea, I thought, than to ask Anita Thompsonout in the paper, since my column had to do with asking a girl out to begin with. Michelle Bertalot and I pulled her out of class, saying it was for an interview for yearbook, and I handed her a copy with the phrase 'So, um, Anita Thompson, will you go out with me?' She said "ves," and I did a little dance down the hall after she went back to math class." Photo by Carla Corbitt

The conversion of great minds, adviser Sandra Graham and junior Editor-in-Chief Jennie Cramlet discuss changes in the yearbook layout. "This is my first year as editor and it's such an overwhelming experience. I don't think that most people really know how much hard work and late nights our staff puts into this book. There's also that little secret that room 70 is a total looney bin, straight jackets included," stated Cramlet. Photo by Natalie Barba

Quiet meditation, senior Carla Corbitt works on her pages while blocking out the classroom by listening to music. "Lit is my favorite to listen to in yearbook but occasionally someone vicious puts in their 'NSync CD in an attempt to get the pop tunes stuck in my head. My best guess is that the culprit is Kelsey Reynolds." The yearbook staff condensed this year to 10 girls. "Being a part of the staff gives you such a sense of pride, just knowing the people will be looking through it years from now means so much and makes it all worth while," stated Corbitt Photo by Natalie Barba

Students streamed by the large table on their way to lunch. Some stopped to read the poster which read "Join S.A.D.D.- Students Against Drunk Driving," and questioned just what the club would do. When told that they would help plan mock car crashes and assemblies with guest speakers that caused deaths through drunk driving accidents, many jumped at the opportunity to participate. At the end of a 30 minute membership drive, 52 people had signed up to join. This was S.A.D.D.'s first year in existence at Lebanon High School and had to overcome many obstacles to become recognized.

Besides drunk driving, the club also emphasized the prevention of drug abuse, sexually transmitted diseases and many other high-risk behaviors.

S.A.D.D. used to be called Students Against Drunk Driving; a version of Mothers Against Drunk Driving especially formed for youth. In order to cover more consequences to actions though, S.A.D.D. changed their name to what it is presently.

Honor Society

When: Tuesday's at Lunch Where: Little Theater

Honor Society is thought to be made up of those whose grade point average is 3.5 or better. But in all actuality, more traits are looked at during the application process than merely their grades. Those in Honor Society had to fill out an extensive application that was reviewed by a board of teachers to be analyzed for the students character, scholarship, service, and leadership. Character was based on the student's interaction with other students and teachers as well as their dedication to perfection in their schoolwork. Leadership was determined by involvement in school and through extracurricul ar activies.

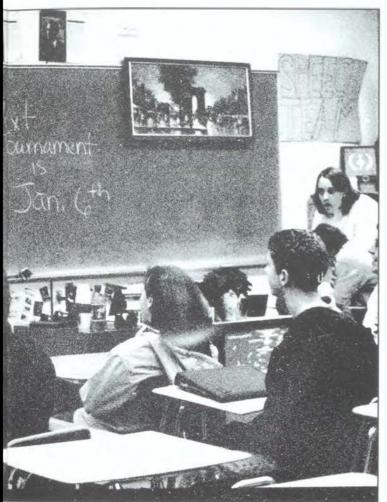

Candle in the wind, senior Cassie Jones lights the candle representing service. Seniors Carla Corbitt, Cody Donahue, Jana Atchley, and Jones all delivered speeches on the different aspects of Honor Society. Photo by Sarah Jones

"I like being involved in Honor Society because it makes you feel like you've been rewarded for all the hard work you've done. Being treasurer gives me that chance to be an active part of the society," stated Natalie Barba. Photo by Sarah Jones

Forensics When: Friday at lunch Page design by Carla Corbitt and Sarah Aitkin

Where: Anne Wittwer's classroom

The forensics team, commonly referred to as the speech team, was started three years ago when Anne Wittwer began teaching at Lebanon High School. Introducing students to the club through her speech class, the team grew from four charter members to this years group of eleven. The speech team competes an average of once a month at tournaments all over Oregon. The members can either bring prepared presentations and speeches or participate in unprepared impromptu or debate.

Portrayed emotion, junior Scott Stewart performs his after dinner speech which he was very successful with this year. Stewart took first place in the after dinner catergory at many competitions. Photo by Natalie Barba

On my honor, juniors take the oath for Honor Society. "Ever since 1 heard about Honor Society last year, I wanted to be a part of it. It's a great award and an even better way to become involved in school. I consider it my first stepping stone to taking over the world," commented junior inductee Jennie Cramlet. Photo by Sarah Jones

Paperwork is the pits, junior member Tara Meek goes over notes from the the Friday meeting of Quill and Scroll. "Even though Quill and Scroll doesn't have a lot of meetings, its members still have a lot of work to do behind the scenes with being involved in publications," commented Meek. Poetry Club

Where: Kerry Wells' room When: Wednesday's at lunch Why: Why not?

Poetry club is a group of students; sophomores, juniors, and seniors; who met weekly to read their own poetry and listen to adviser Kerry Wells recite published pieces, but this club was never restricted to written verse. Students were free to talk about anything they wished during poetry club meetings. "During our meetings, we talk about philosophy, equality, and, of course and most importantly, poetry," commented

Ulm was interested in writing and showed this through her enrollment in many various writing classes, such as Creative Writing, Journalism, and Advanced American Language Arts. Photo by Sara Tracy

Hard at work, sophomore Tom Gruner plays with the editing system. "I remember last year when I was in math watching the announcements, I realized I wanted to do that. Then I figured out that I had signed up for the class for the second semester. I now know that I want to be a news anchor, just like Tom Brokaw," remarked Gurner. Photo by Sara Tracy

Ready for the spotlight, the choir warms up their voices during class. "This is my first yearinchoir, and I amhaving a great time. I really like singing all period; it is different than any other class," remarked senior Andrea Standley. Photo by Sara Tracy

Video Productions

The Video Productions classes of 2000-2001 had a lot of changes throughout the

The daily year. production changed to a weekly production to involve more students and make it more professional. The new weekly production included features. commercials, movie previews, previews of bands in the school and the community, and announcements for the week. More students paid attention because it was more interesting and there was always the ossibility that they would see themselves on it. The new program gave many chances for improvement and experience with the cameras and the editing machines. The students were able to do reports on site and interview a wider span of people.

Ready to tape, junior Joseph Carter tests the carnera before a big report. "Video Productions is a great class. Working with new people and getting to know how carneras work is a great experience. Plus, I love being on TV. I look good on carnera," said Carter. Photo by Sara Tracy

Practice makes perfect, the choir prepares the day before their big performance." Choir is a fun class. It is a great place to have fun with your friends and work on improving your singing voice," remarked junior Maria Samoylich, singing with Rachael Hayes and Anita Thompson. Photo by Sara Tracy

With enthusiasm, the choir class sings their hearts out. "My favorite part of choir is when we had a concert because we get together with both classes and sing. It is always a lot of fun," commented junior Natalie Frazer. Photo by Sara Tracy

Come in on cue, the band warms up with a b flat concert scale and gets in tune with their neighbors before hitting the field for marching practice. Freshman Xan Legg stated, "I'm in band because I like playing the alto sax." He has been playing the saxophone since fourth grade. Marching Band Color Guard

When: Half time

Where: Friday night in Heath Stadium Who: A typical Lebanon High School student

A mass of red and blue covers the football field. The crowd goes silent, not knowing what to expect. In unison, the notes fill the air in the form of traditional fight songs and upbeat melodies that are new to the crowd. The sea of color parts, and from the bleachers the patterns are visible. Where one group diverges another joins, creating a breathtaking visual effect. The demonstrated performance is the result of numerous hours of practice and a commitment to excellence that was all worth while in the end. Accompanying the band is the color guard who danced and used their flags to emphasize important parts of the music. Occasionally the rally squad and band members joined forces in the name of encouraging students to cheer on their team. The squad performed a dance to a fight song in accompaniment with the band and guard. The result was a positive example of unity within our school.

On the down beat, Roger Mitchell, the conductor for the music department works out the kinks in a new piece of music. Mitchell has been working with Lebanon High School students since 1996. "This year has been exciting because of the additional instruction available through the new schedule. We are progressing with two groups, winds and percussion, rehearsing and developing separately. The students we had in band were extremely dedicated and committed to performing with an outstanding product. It was marvelous that these students chose to make music an important part of their life." Photo by Carla Corbitt

In perfect form, learning the steps is one thing, but executing them while trying to remember music and cues is another. Few realize all the work that band members invest to preform for their audiences. Practice makes perfect, and this dedicated band used every spare moment in an attempt to perfect their performance. Realizing the undeserved stigma placed on band, junior Carly Chaput stated, "Band gets ripped on a lot, but it's actually a lot of fun and [involves] hard work." Photo by Carla Corbitt

Follow the leader, Jay Adamson and Laura Irby are serving as the 2000-2001 Drum Majors. A massive leadership role, their job ranges from leading rehersals and acting as the marching band's conductor on the field to running the marching camp held in the summer. Senior Laura Irby commented, "I think the most important things to learn in band are to work hard and have fun. Everything else is just a bonus." Photo by Carla Corbitt

It ain't worth a thing if it ain't got that swing, senior Niki Poole leads the saxophone section of the pep band as they practice. "This one time at band camp, 1 got my finger stuck in my mouthpiece and couldn't get it out." Photo by Sara Tracy

In unison, the flag team performs at a pep assembly to mark the kick off of the fall sports season. They accompanied the band in performances at football games and band competitions. "We do many fun things and meet a lot of new people." commented Captain Rachel Oeder. Photo by April Sliker

A CHANGING AND SUPPORTIVE LEBANON

Even though the times are changing and the small town of Lebanon is growing big, we still have support from many of the businesses that contribute to our community.

My little boy is no longer a little boy. You are about to enter the real world full of all kinds of surprises, pleasures and problems. As long as you remember who you are and who is guiding your footsteps, you can accomplish any and everything you set your mind to. I have all the faith you will succeed in life once your mind is made up. I am so very proud of you and remember I love you and will always be there for you. Congratulations on graduating!! Love, Mom

Well JR, you've reached another milestone in life. You've worked hard and succeeded in acheiving a diploma. WELL DONE. Whichever route you take now: Continued study, vocational or military perservere, take the honorable road, be honest, be genuine, be yourself, help others along the way. You will do well!! Love, Terry

Fitch

We love you Harley! The years have gone by so quickly. Where does the time go? From infant to toddler to exploring the world around you to moody adolescent to manhood, you have brought so much joy to our lives, and we love you so much! Congratulations, Harley. We are so proud of you. Love, Mom & Jerol

The yearbook staff would like to thank Jeff Pellissier our Herff Jones representative for his support.

Once again Lebanon High School would like to thank all of the businesses who have supported our school this year.
