

FAREWELL FROM THE WARRIOR

The Warrior's annual staff was comprised of members from all walks of life. We were open to both freshman and students from all houses thus increasing our class size.

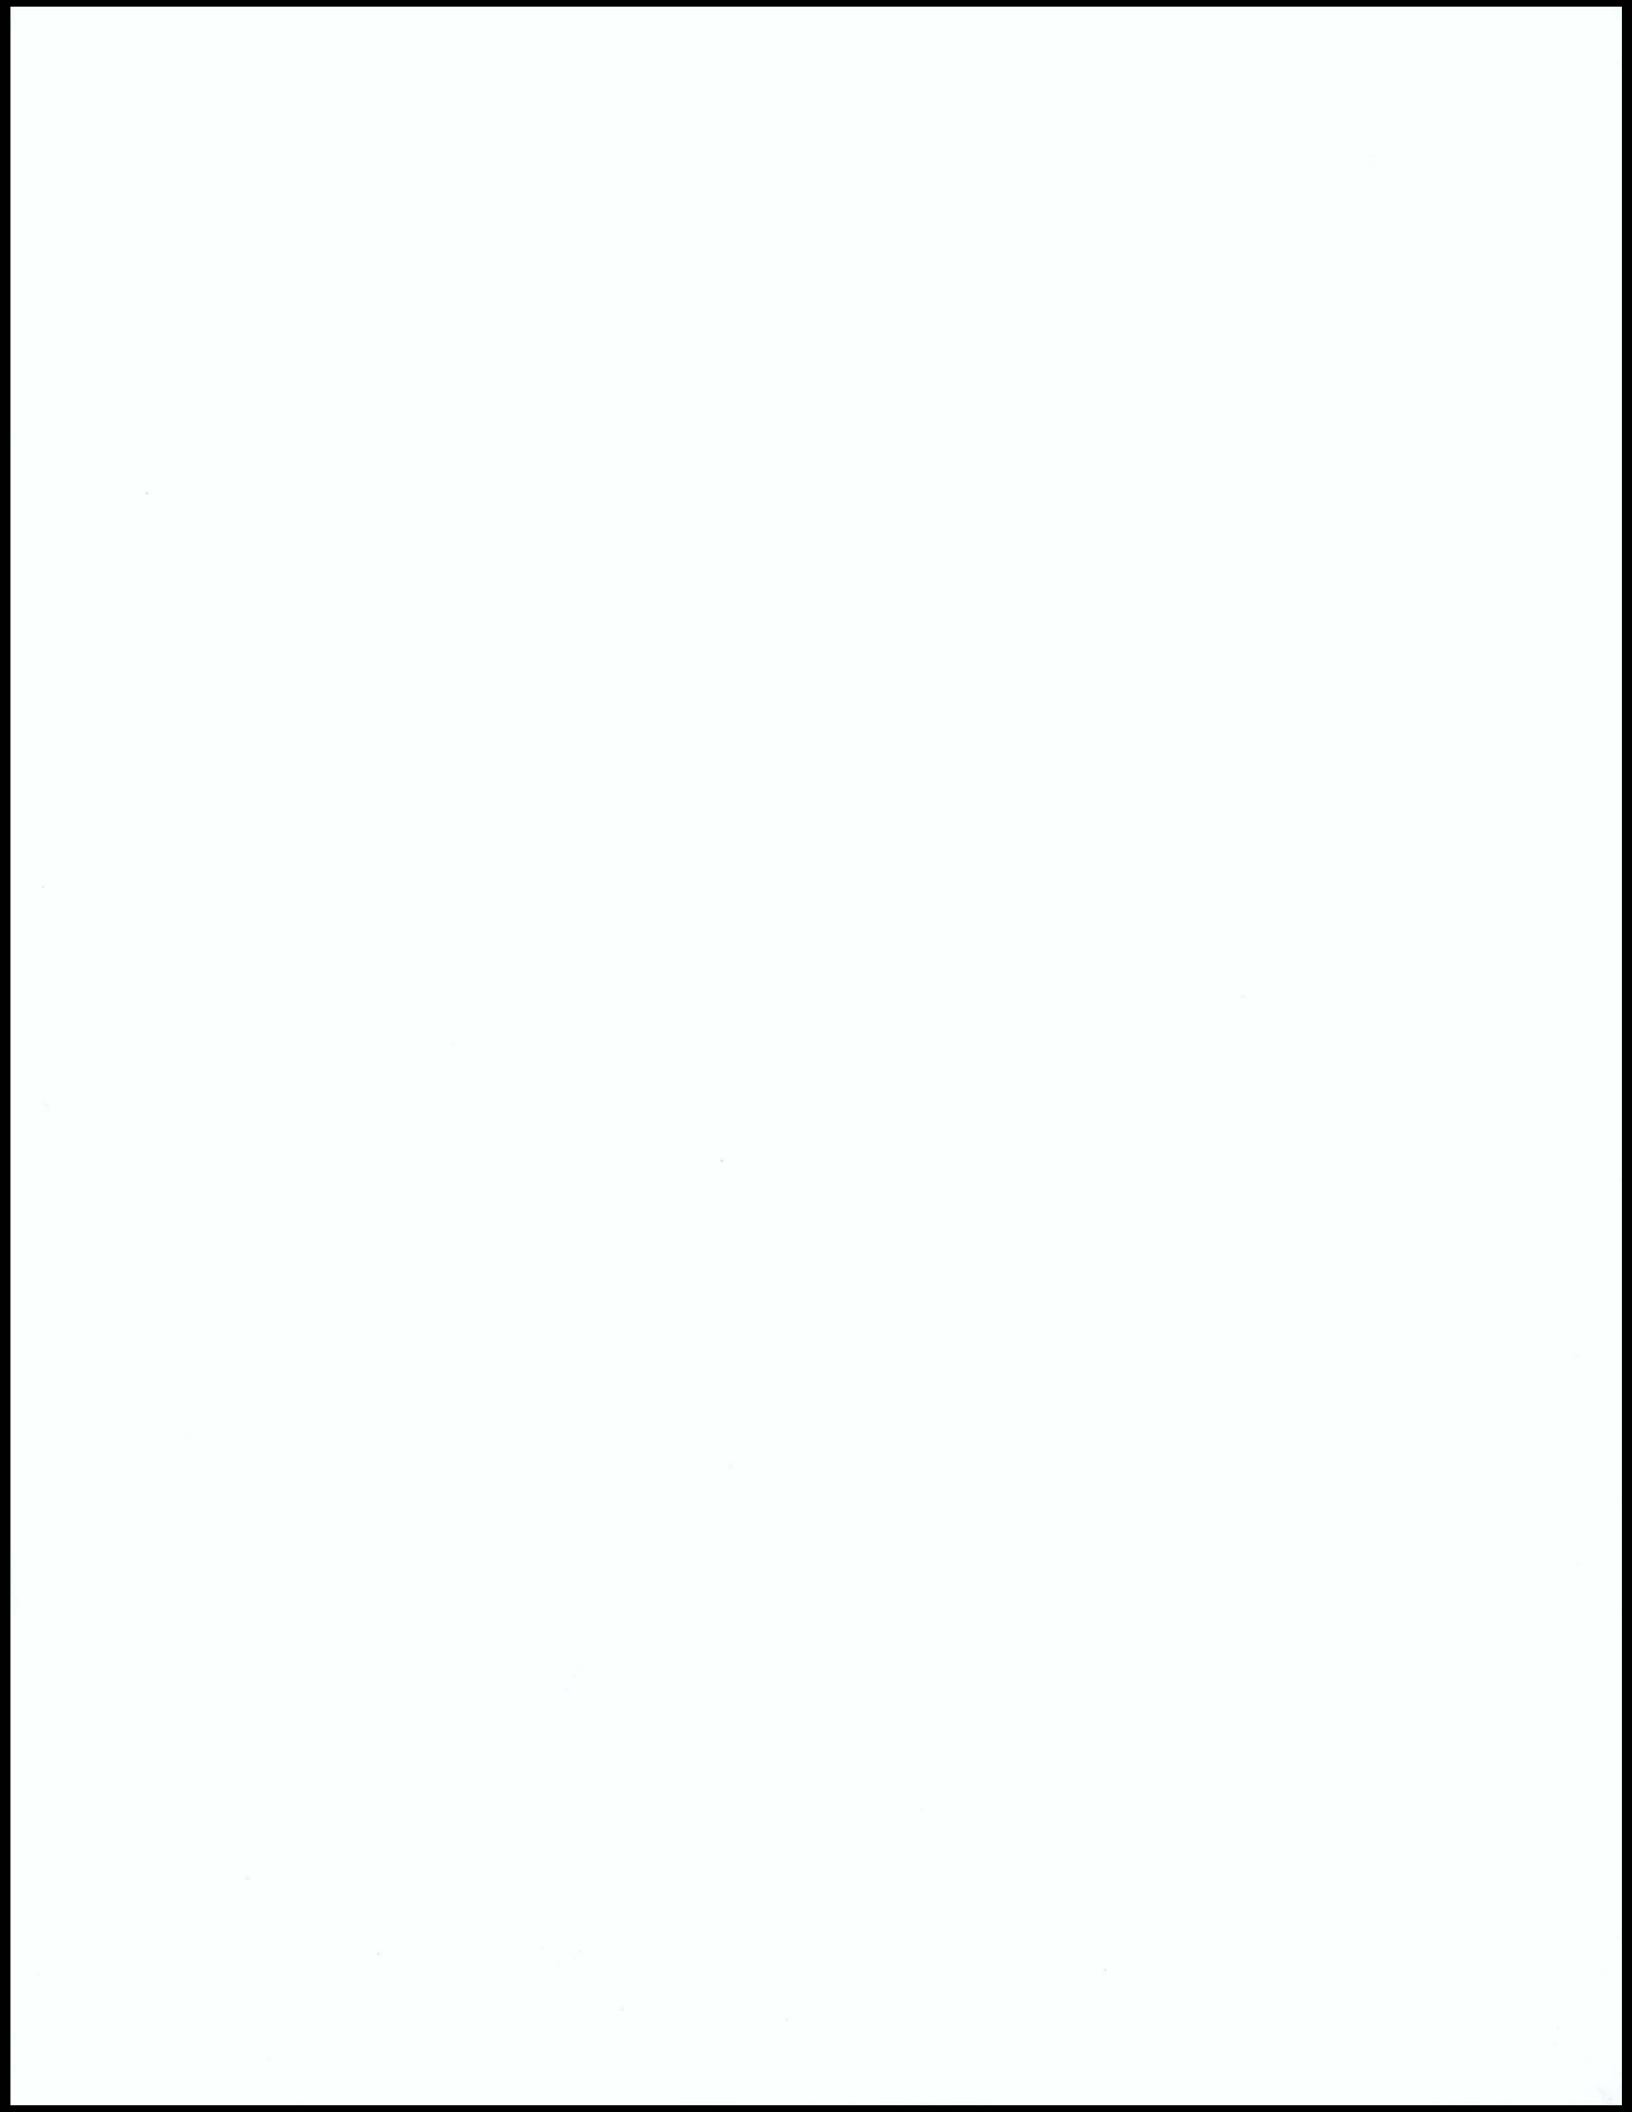

We would like to give thanks from that staff to all the teachers for allowing class disruptions, the administration for getting us computers, the custodians for unlocking the room while our adviser was absent, the publishing plant for allowing our late deadlines and mostly the students for last minute quotes, bringing in pictures, late night identifications and posing whether it was willingly or not.

We faced many challenges but overcoming these challenges made this program stronger and leaves next year on a better footing. We reiterate: Thank you!

Torn Together is the 73rd installation of the Lebanon High School yearbook. Our theme was devised out of the collective efforts by those chosen to be the editors of 2004-2005: Natalie Allen, Rachael Palinkas, Rachel Cagle, Jenny Nordstrand Alisa Hurtado and James Griffith. This book is 8.5 by 11" and is printed by Herff Jones on 100# Premier Premium paper. The staff used Macintosh computers with InDesign CS for all page production, while photos were taken with Canon Digital Rebels or Fuji Film Finepix s602s and we used Adobe Photoshop CS for all of our photo editing. Our headline font was AHJ SOME, with an AHJ Harold sub-head, while our caption font was AHJ Opus and most importantly our cover font was AHJ RISID. We produced a 208 page book with a 16 page supplement, making a total of 224 pages and printed 900 copies at $46 each, $52 after December 15th, or $55 after June 1st. The 2004-2005 staff would like to thank Herff Jones, our representative Bill Dube, and the teachers and students who helped make this yearbook.

TORN TOGETHER

Lebanon High School and its inhabitants have gone through many changes in the past several years. The changing of principals, the loss of loved teachers and the tearing down of buildings. But no change has been as dramatic as the division of the school into four new academies.

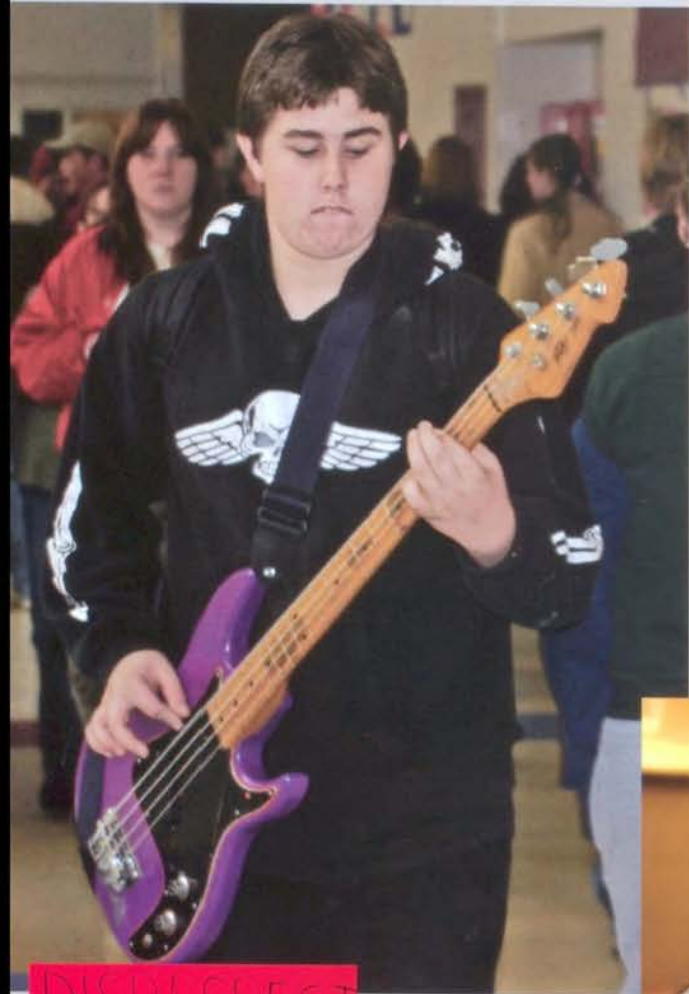

We were torn from the school life we knew and forced to continue on despite changing surroundings, but through the fumes and dust we have endured together.

We dedicate this book to our fellow students and committed staff as we go through these changes.

TORN

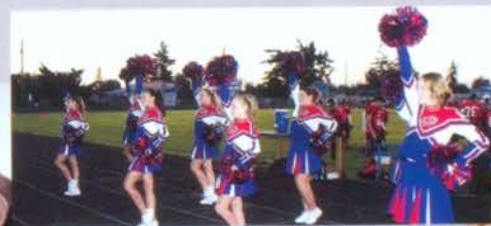

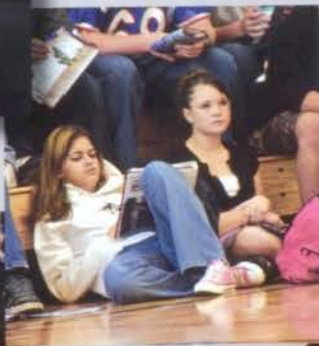

TOGETHER, we, the students of Lebanon High School, were torn into four academies- Information System, Living System, Social System and Physical System.

No matter which academy you chose, we experienced these changes in our school and life together.

Never have we gone through such a dramatic change, but we have endured it with strength beyond what could have ever been expected.

Together we have been TORN, but Together we will remain, for we are Lebanon High School.

SUMMER VACATION

Another Summer

Endless construction and unplanned snowfall led to an extension of the 2004 school year. Students found the ringing of school bells lingering in their ears for another two weeks. With the closing of the Drive-In, alternative plans were needed to sustain the hearts of our sun stricken, fun deprived teens. Students found themselves spending their money on tanning lotion. Whether you were at the lake making a splash or camping with friends, it was fun just as well. No matter what memories were created this summer or who those memories and fateful days were spent with, we will always remember the summer of 2004 for what it was. Toooooo short...

How did you spend your time this summer?

- 49% Hung out with friends
- 22% Took a trip
- 16% Worked
- 8% Watched T.V.
- 5% Played Video Games

"I climbed to the top of the South Sister- 10,358 ft."

Dirty Life, over the summer Paige Williams went to Northwest Youth Corps where she was only allowed one shower a week.

Washington D.C.

It was the eighth grade trip for our new freshmen. A learning and socializing event for all. Just over 40 of them left on June 20 for Washington D.C. on a red eye flight and arrived in time to go to the amusement park, Busch Gardens.

Even after all the sites, the most memorable thing for many was the heat and humidity.

Get hi-Tech, junior Allison Cawrse spends the last week of July in Rocket City Huntsville, Alabama. There, she learned what it means to be an astronaut from NASA's specialists.

Crabby, senior Cooper Huffman proudly displays the crabs he caught earlier. Huffman barely had any free time this summer for any sort of hunting, considering his busy work schedule. Huffman enlisted in the Marines this year.

*"I went to Europe and got bitten by a monkey."

Freshmen Orientation Person otherwise known as FOP helped the freshmen to feel more at home during orientation. The day before school all the incoming freshmen came to LHS and they got a tour of the school. Unlike last year, they were able to go to all their classes and attend a pep assembly.

The leaders, ranging from sophomores to seniors, held up signs containing a number to gather their group of at least 15 freshmen.

Every FOP member was given a tee shirt and took their responsibilities seriously.

Above: Come one, come all, and see the Human Fly Trap. Senior Jamie Martinez learns early in the year how to help rid the school of some of the fly epidemic. Senior Sam Ellis looked on in disbelief holding the four dollars that Martinez made after eating the fly.

IN THE BEGINNING

there was an end...

...to construction, so we thought. Freshmen orientation being full of young minds, FOP's, dust, boxes and random debris; the year had a difficult beginning. Summer had run its all too short course, and we found ourselves back at school; back in a world where halls experienced random closures and classrooms occasionally camped out. But in the end, it was the allure of a fully renovated school that held us to our course and allowed us to find hope. The hope there is in change and struggle, a fleeting aspiration to an eventual life of comfort, glamour, and glory which lay just on the other side of this memorable experience called high school...

"Ask not for whom the school bell (fog horn?) tolls, if you hear it, you're late."

Tristan Reece, 12

Left: Not enough time?, "This summer, I missed the crowded hallways, I liked seeing people," said senior Shane Finster as he and fellow senior James Goodrich walk the busy halls to class.

Left: Watch your step, new landscaping and plants invade Lebanon High.

the big red and blue

With more flavors than an international bazaar, one can find a startling variety of personalities during Homecoming Week: nerds, cowboys, greasers, pirates, and even a few people in costume too. Everyone enjoyed dressing up and stepping into the movies for a day or two. Monday's Pirates of the Caribbean theme lead to a few interesting looks in the senior photo. All in all, it proved a fun accent to the rest of the week. Tuff Puff, Powderpuff, and the Homecoming Game and Dance, and the lunchtime activities, all kept us at a fun but frantic pace. The seniors remained undefeated after the Powderpuff game and Friday's dance perfectly ended a great week.

Above: Bow to me, Homecoming Court 2005. Left: The Force be with you, senior J'Aime Beck dresses up for Revenge of the Nerds day during spirit week.

Mud on the face, a look of fierceness comes from the eyes of junior Taylor Judy.

Keeping their eye on the grand ol' flag, as the varsity players listen to the Star Spangled Banner.

"It was fun to ride in the limo all night and then goof off in the play place at McDonald's in our dresses!"
Alyssa Molina, ?

This year homecoming was organized by students in the Leadership class. In charge of the dance and coronation were seniors Evie Santana, Nathan Edwards, Grace Sansom and JD Luton. It included small twinkling lights and an optional limo ride. Senior Leah Stock, ASB Treasurer, was in charge of managing all money for the "Hollywood Homecoming" Activities. Hard work by all!

Top: Smiling Queen and handsome King, seniors Brooke Scofield and John Wollenbarger wear the crown. The men rode in to the half time coronation ceremony in a Humvee, while the decked out ladies rode in a stretch limosine. The court emerged to camera flashes much like a red carpet event in Hollywood. Bottom: Stiff arm them, as senior Nate Probert runs for a touchdown. The game went into overtime, but a victory was not to be.

How We Looked

When thinking of yearbook pictures, one tends to visualize girls with large feathered bangs and boys in corduroy bell-bottoms. Images that harken back to the groovy times of our parents.

I can reassure you, such groovy-ness will not be found within these pages. No, the times have changed, and even with punk and vintage looks seen everywhere, the dominating trend is whatever makes you comfortable.

However, in time to come, our children may refer to our generation with the same cringe and raised eyebrow. Until this day comes, live it up and dress like you mean it.

SENIORS class of 2005

In the fall of 2001, we all came together with one thing in common. We were finally freshmen and unfortunately, underclassmen. From that point forward, high school became a time for us to discover ourselves and what makes each of us unique and an individual. Many of us became involved in sports, while many others pursued the arts. Not only did we discover ourselves, but met new friends as well.

Aside from the social aspect and what made high school fun, high school was a place to prepare for the future. Some of us fully recognized this and spent countless hours preparing to achieve greatness, while others may remain average.

During the last four years, not one person has gone unchanged. Not only have we influenced each other but we have all been affected by the tragedy of 9/11, the loss of many teachers and peers, and transitioning into small learning communities. We all started here together and have influenced each other to become who we are.

We all helped to create our class. Once more we will all come together, as graduating seniors, and show our community that we, the class of 2005, have put in our time, and are ready to meet our future.

Sincerely,
Bekah Coady

From all walks of life we entered high school together. Throughout the years we experienced gain and loss. We made friends, we lost them. We entered this place segregated and unaware of who our class was. And now, four years later we remain, still segregated and maybe knowing each other a little better.

High school is more than a social engagement, it is a step, a step onward in life, into a fragile change that forms who we are to become and what we will achieve. The inevitable change, whether it be to fade from popularity into obscurity, or to rise to greatness, we will all go into the world, another human being.

Some of us will achieve greatness, others will join the nameless billions. Whatever you become, remember Lebanon High School is where it began, and congratulate yourself for taking that first step up the stairs, with each new step representing a part of your life.

Remember your class of 2005; we have all had an effect on each other, we are all influenced by each others presence, whether it is for good or bad, we have helped each other become who we are.

The class of 2005.

The changes have come and gone leaving this year one to be remembered. This class has traveled so far from the freshmen we were in September 2001. As a whole we faced pressures and challenges that molded our very beings. We entered a world with bigger than life seniors: their benches, halls, pranks, and crazy assemblies. We leave now in the very role they were. We will leave a lasting impression on all aspects of this school.

The long hours, scares of no Home Release periods, and almost no class T-shirt were well worth it for the memories. An acquaintance from this class once said to me, "Don't do what you want to do; but do what you feel you're called to." That will stay with me for a life time along with all my other contacts with this class. Whether or not we knew each other or never even met this section was made for you. This is for us, all of us, and those who should be with us.

I hope this will remind you of what we came from. Try to remember what we have learned: to mourn, to laugh and joke, but most importantly, to scream and chant with pride... '05!

class of 2006

Ready or not, we were finally upper classmen. We entered this school from all angles; the LMS modulars, the dusty construction of Seven Oaks, and many other places.

Each year our schedules changed. From the AB block, to the straight block, and finally to trimesters this year. Construction transformed the building from run down to a brand new look.

We experienced many memories from Proms dazzling night, to scaring the Seniors out of their wits - losing by only two points in Powder Puff!

On to our senior year!

class of 2007

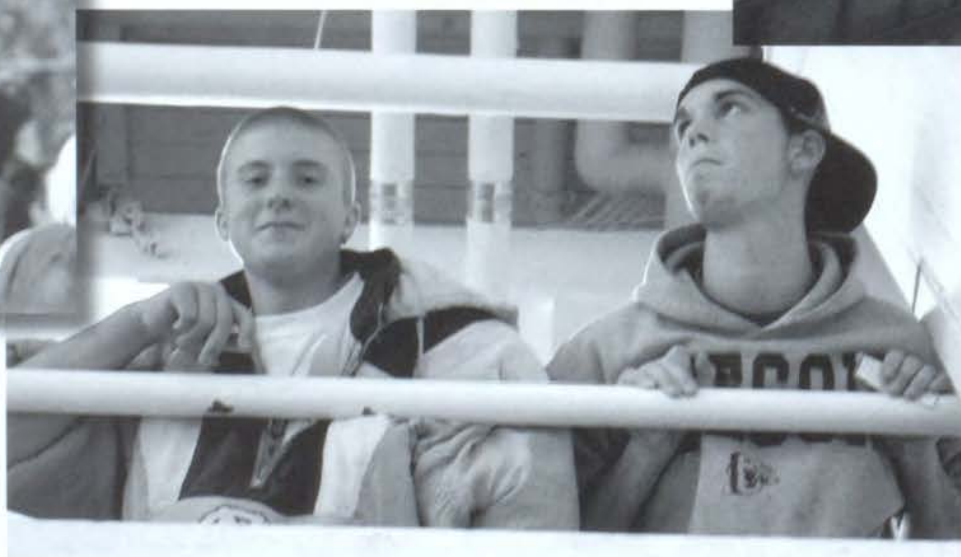

The upper hand on the lower half. This year tenth graders were integrated into the main populace. After a hard first year, they entered new wings. Except for those sophomores in Living Systems; the 400s wing is still their home for two more years. The class has gone from segregation to being split in four due to the lack of grade specific courses and the creation of the new Small Learning Systems. No matter if they were in the same building or classes they held high class spirits. Onward to their Junior year they travel. Good Luck!

The incoming freshmen class experienced all the same emotions, thoughts and feelings that many upperclassmen felt as freshmen. "This school is so big", "Are the classes going to be hard?", "Will I make lots of new friends?"

In addition to the transition of adjusting to a new school, with new requirements and a lot more people, they also had to deal with a new schedule that was still in development.

The future of the academy system lies in the hands of the class of 2008. Freshmen hall is no more. Freshmen are scattered amongst the four academies. The new system is all they know and hopefully they make the best of it. If they are like classes before them they will land firmly with both feet, ready to run!

Hanging around,

Take it easy, Yuri Shevel sits back and enjoys a bite to eat during lunch.

They teach us, they sculpt us, they work to make our lives better. Through this last year of madness and growth, the staff of LHS has persevered through several moves and new classifications, to ensure that our educational experiences are the best they can make them.

We've all watched our teachers work very hard this year to incorporate the new SLC system into the school. This has been a rebirth from old ways, into a bright future. The staff is the fiber of the school that holds us all together and leads us on, into tomorrow.

Staff field trip, a teacher from each system, went to Boston for a SLC visitation. "Mr.B" retrieved this sign during the parade after the Boston Red Sox won the World series.

Above: Oh man, Drafting teacher John Oman show the seniors what he is really made of, at this years Tuff Puff game.

Left: Blab away, Veteran wrestling Coach and Math wiz Jim Vandehey spends a generous amount of class time talking about his student classifications, based on hot dog types.

Many thanks to all LHS staff from the 04-05 Yearbook staff. Without each of your help and cooperation we never could have made this book. From allowing our photographers into your classrooms and keeping us informed about upcoming special projects and events, to letting us get students out of your classes to interview them, making announcements, and keeping financial records, we are indebted to each of you. Thanks again!

HOW WE LEARNED

2004 sparked a new learning environment for all the students at LHS. A system called Small Learning Communities was implemented. Each student and incoming freshman picked a House to go into, based on the academics each House offered.

Living, Physical, Social and Information systems were up for grabs. Trimesters and a five period day replaced semesters. Even scheduling changed, from organized forecasting sheets last year to chaotic arena scheduling this year. And schedule change upon schedule change.

Despite the many class drops and schedule changes, students settled into the new system.

Each house worked to create an "identity" and to help students get a good education. Who knows what these changes will bring?

Take a closer look, sophomore Seth Probert and junior Tori Harvey give a presentation

Write it down, senior Dustin Bry looks to his computer monitor for notes in Tim Hellands web design class.

Making the grade, junior Cortnee Hanson works hard on an assignment.

Building skills, sophomores Gary Wanzer and Steven Kau and junior Gavin Pruitt focus on book work.

INFORMATION

Design and Communication through Technology

Information System students learn about communications and design through the application of various technologies. Each student is able to work hands on with computers and get the feel of visual, media and interactive design and communication.

Fashion, interior and web design are all highly sought classes. The student run Warrior Spirit Newspaper and The Warrior Yearbook are also available to those who feel up to the challenge of working on print publications.

As this academy develops students will be able to investigate a wide variety of cutting edge subjects in the growing area of Information technology and design.

Top 5 careers chosen by Information System:

- 1) Game Designer
- 2) Photographer
- 3) Computer Programming
- 4) Web Designer
- 5) Fashion Designer

Preach it sisters, sophomores Jessica Silva and Tina Lee speak about V.O.I.C.E. in front of Tina Rimov's American in Modern World history class. Voicing Our Ideas for Change Effectively is a student run organization that allowed fellow peers to voice their ideas and opinions on school wide issues. One major issue brought up during the discussion was respect. The students who spoke up said there was a problem with respect amongst students and teachers, and would like to help the situation.

"Be true to yourself and it will all work out in the end."
 - Samantha Pierce, 11

Cartography? freshmen Melissa Cordero and Ryan Cunningham concentrate on completing a map.

Concentrate, freshman Gabriel Casterline struggles to stay awake and complete his assignment.

Where is your story? publications adviser and Journalism teacher Mark Whitson enjoys a moment to wind down.

Another candid? senior Tristan Reece takes a moment to try and scare the camera. Reece was one of the co-editors-in-chief of the Newspaper. The other co-editor was senior Eric Knight.

Photo director, senior Justin Atterberry helps freshman Marissa Mougeotte download photos in the crunch of deadline. Yearbook worked as a team as much as possible. Atterberry was just one of the staff members who was willing to help and take time out of his busy schedule to get the job done. After school time was crucial with both Yearbook and Newspaper and quite a bit of time was put in after class and many late evenings were spent in the publications room.

Dun tada da, junior John Evans displays his linear sculpture of the Sydney Opera House in Steve Quigley's art class.

Hmm, junior Lupe Collins and sophomore Ashley Lefebvre type in Pam Maeyaert's computer applications.

SOCIAL

The understanding of our Role in Society

Social Systems students study to attain lifelong knowledge through course content emphasizing culture, diversity, societal groups and social dynamics.

There were four different strands which the students in social could pick from: business, community studies, arts or family and consumer studies.

Theater arts, fine arts, video productions, culinary arts, choir and running the student store were all popular offerings.

An integrated, humanities based approach to teaching Language arts and Social studies was being developed this year.

Straw house, freshman Joe Potter builds a linear sculpture of a house in Steve Quigley's explore art class.

Top 5 careers chosen by Social System:

- 1) Lawyer
- 2) Chef
- 3) Police Officer
- 4) Teacher
- 5) Business Person

Did you say something? Teacher Dave Winters makes time to grade papers.

Cram session, seniors Katie Danielson and Leah Stock take advantage of class time to finish an assignment.

Right: Role of the dice, senior Erin Van Atta made this game board for teacher Scott Crowell's Advanced Placement Language Arts class. The students read Gulliver's Travels and then picked from a list of projects to either work on with a partner or individually. Van Atta chose to work alone and made a game board, the results showed much effort and a good understanding of the book.

"If life is a dream, I hope I don't wake up."

-Candice Goodrich, 11

Left: I'm not touching you, junior Travis Curry and senior Whitney Coakley try to pay attention in Dave Winters Economics. Curry was known for his constantly changing Punk hairstyles and usually had a guitar with him.

Good friends."
-Wyatt King, 10*

Hard at work, seniors Whitney Mitchell, Nicole Kaprielian and Allison Olson use their class time wisely by taking the time to complete their assignment.

Right: Mark of shame, juniors Zach Buckmaster and Jonathan Woods each created a visual to represent The Scarlet Letter in Kerry Wells' American Lit. class.

Grateful Dead anyone? Teacher Scott Crowell takes much needed time to grade some papers. Crowell was a long time fan of the Grateful Dead.

a tone above the rest

Many students who chose to go into Social Systems went because they could express themselves through their voices.

There were three different choir ensembles: Treble, Concert and Chamber. Many students spent class periods traveling to and practicing in competitions, or preparing for school performances. The choir may go slightly unnoticed by the students, but their achievements are more than impressive.

Conductor Kevin Wong was in his second year of directing the choir program; he arranged many opportunities for them to let their voices shine, from holidays in the park to big festivals at Crescent Valley High School. They took every chance to share their voices with the community.

PHYSICAL

"Learning Through Real World Applications"

Physical System's students learn in a skill-oriented environment and focus on things that apply to the real world.

This provides intensive hands-on experience in many different industrial areas.

There are two strands: Pre-Engineering, which focuses on the physical sciences and industrial areas, and Technical which focuses on technical training.

This system works to develop high student achievement by building and constructing as well as learning the history and science behind all the hands-on constructions.

Welding

Welding is one of the most well known vocational classes at LHS. It is definitely a favorite among many of the incoming students.

Despite the change to a new teacher - Earl Bishop, the students who have taken this course under previous instructing remain interested and focused on learning new material and techniques.

The welding program has continued to be top ranked in the state for the last few years. Although the program was in transition this year, they stayed near the top of their game.

Every year the best of our welding students compete in the Linn Benton Community College Welding Skills Contest in several different categories. This year we took 5 students, one of whom was senior Brian Sears who placed first in the division that he participated in, which he has done the last two years.

LIVING

"Understanding Our Complex Living World"

Living is a way of life. Many obstacles and many deep holes. Boundaries that are broken and mended, goals that are set and reached, experiences that make us human.

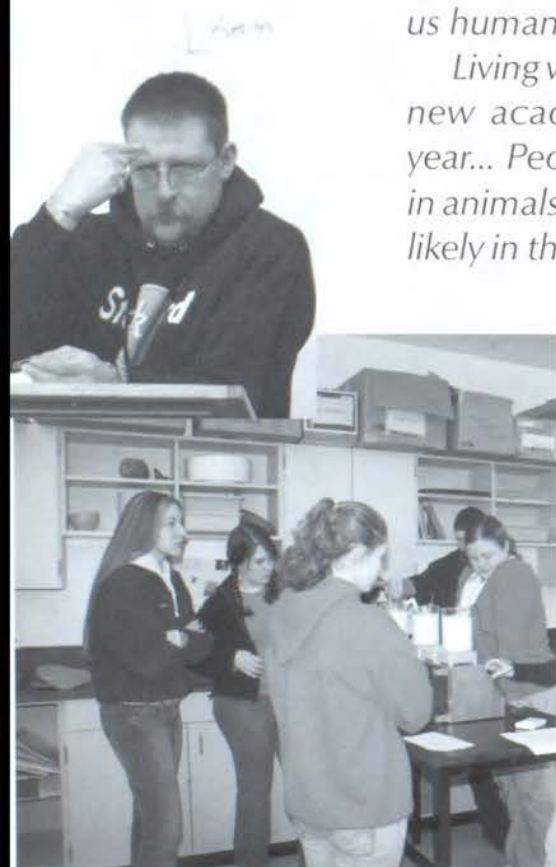

Living was also one of the four new academies installed this year... People who had interest in animals or science were most likely in this system. Classes such as Zoology, Biology, Health Occupations and Agriculture were just a few of the exciting classes students could take.

Living was a popular system this year. More students signed up for it than any other system. Apparently Lebanon students have an interest in living.

Living system is where the future is. Living is life.

Music to ones soul

There are many types of music that we all turn our ears to. For Lebanon High we have our own bands such as Symphonic Band, Concert Band and Jazz Band. Symphonic and Concert Bands play their hearts out at our football games, and pep rallies. The music keeps us cheering for our teams, and for our graduating class. They also participate in our community Strawberry Parade and Veteran Parades where they got 3rd place.

Of course it is not all about the Symphonic and Concert Bands. Jazz band also is involved our community.

During one of their outings they went to the Lebanon Hospital and performed as a fund raiser. They also attend many competitions in state and out of state. Jazz Band is a zero period class five days a week.

The Concert and Symphonic Bands also do their share of duties and take up their share of after school hours. The hard work shows in the abilities of our different bands.

Students enrolled in band have more fun than humans should be allowed to have.

HOW WE LIVED

The question is not how did we live, but what did we live for?

Why do we get up early every morning, put ourselves together and drag our bodies and sometimes minds to this place we call school?

Is there a hidden desire to be in this crowded building, underneath all the hostility and rebellion?

The answer is found within each of us, in that small place you hide the thoughts you share with only the people closest to you.

For now we continue learning, at least a little, from our mistakes and shaping ourselves into what we will someday become. The events that will happen, whether we like it or not, give us opportunities and take small bits of our sanity.

We stick close to our friends, resolving problems and sometimes creating more. Learning new things about ourselves that shape our futures with every step that we take, whether knowingly or not.

So what did we live for?

Some of us will find the answer in college, and some of us will find it when we have successful careers, but somewhere along the line we all find something close to an answer.

"JUMP, JIVE AND WAIL!"

teen spirit at its best

In the halls, or in the gym, our school has one unique way of showing their pride for being out in the crowd. The fields may be against us, and the ball game might not be a shame, and still we keep it together. Despite baked potatoes filling our mouths so we can't shout, and the smell of burnt popcorn filling our nostrils, we can boost our team and rally for the band. Students play against students and sometimes even teachers, but no matter who we play, nobody quits.

School spirit shines throughout the entire campus with costumed nerds and a handful of T-Birds, even some painted faces. Loud is our National Anthem. Friends join in cheering. Not just because it lets them get out of class and get to see friends, but because of the little slice of Americana it creates in our hearts and minds.

Well that, and maybe because it signals it's close to that popular time of day...

This year the guys were:

Taylor Judy, Andrew McHill, Andrew Walnum, Alex Kuhns, Jesse Flick, Jordan Jantzi, Zach Buckmaster and David Sullivan. The girls were: Tori Harvey, Cammi Bloom, Janell Pulido, Barbara McGehee, Lindsey Aikin, Allysse Adams, Ashley Bilyeu and Pam Cowart.

People came to see their friends dressed to the hilt in their glitz and glam, and break it down on the dance floor. Music from pop to country got everyone in the mood.

Cheering filled the air as the junior court walked down the magic red carpet. All sixteen royals looked fabulous, and flashes went off everywhere to capture the looks and special moments. COMMON RELATIONS

Love and family

Two weeks, two days or one minute: no matter what the length of time spent with someone, there was some connection made.

With 1351 students and 70+ staff members there were plenty of opportunities to meet someone new. These relationships ranged from dating, to family, to best friends, even enemies, and teacher to student mentorships.

Hopefully, the time spent with people will not be quickly forgotten rather pleasantly remembered. They were an integral part of our lives and growing as young adults.

Here are a few of the many...

Case of the giggles, freshmen Allie Stock and Jonnie Atchley burst out in laughter during a photo shoot. The girls enjoyed a break from class for a deadline photo.

This couple is a great model, as both students actively participate in the STARS program. "He's great. We hang out every day... We went to Coos Bay once with his family and I had to sleep with his mom. T.J. and I had to sleep in the same room and it was kind of awkward." -K

students show their talent

Whether photography, drawing, writing or design, students showed much artistic ability. Each individual showed it in their own way. Some paint or draw, others love the stage and performance. Our new art teacher, Dawn Freuden, began the year without floor tiles or tables and chairs, Steve Quigley's classroom moved from the now destroyed modulares into Social Systems. The warriorspirit began to feature more artwork. Students looked forward to the return of photography as an elective, perhaps even a digital photo class! Class art work could be appreciated in the new multi-purpose room and even on websites such as deviantArt and Elfwood.

A TIME TO EAT

a time to drink

Lunch seems all too short, a measly 42 minutes. Not close to enough time for most students. Even though it may be short, students still find time to relax and enjoy a meal whether it be on or off campus.

There are a couple options for eating on campus such as the student store and the cafeteria. Off campus had many more choices. Students could get Chinese, American, Mexican, Italian and other types of food. Lebanon is home to a wide variety of fast food restaurants, stores and coffee shops.

Since the high school allowed off campus lunch, students had the freedom to choose where to eat as long as they are back in time for their next class.

Dutch craze

If you have ever thought that coffee was a drug, you might have been right. Or maybe it was just the fast, friendly, and reliable service. No matter the time of day, the line at the local Dutch Brothers coffee stand was always jam packed with cars waiting for their special made drink. For those caffeine free drinkers there were great fruit jet teas, smoothies and other options from the Panty Boy menu.

or lack thereof...

Whether by big trucks, fast cars, spray painted bikes or on foot, there are many ways to get to school. Some students even use motorized scooters for transportation and seek equal rights with the bikers. There are also people who may have to stick their thumb out a few times to get to school. Many people drove their unique cars and trucks to school mainly for show and they garnered much of the attention in the brand new school parking lot.

The skateboarders were left in the cold, being forced to walk or find a ride to and from school each morning. However, that may soon change in the future. May the next year bring more unique modes of transportation.

WORKIN' OVERTIME

school, homework, jobs and life

Lebanon teens prove they are willing to go above the duties of homework and studying to make money as well as help out in the community.

There were many ways to volunteer in Lebanon. The Soup Kitchen, the Hospital, Peer Court or just taking a walk and picking up all the garbage when you see it.

Fast Food, grocery stores and coffee shops are where you will find most employed students from school.

Some students even work on farms. We live in "The Grass Seed Capital of the World." Without farm hands we could not keep our title.

Whatever students chose to do, their time was well spent.

A LITTLE LIGHT

on a dark matter

A light is beginning to shine on the problems of our generation. Some believe high school students today are not very involved, however our students prove this to be false. They show their support for cancer research, American troops in Iraq and finding missing persons.

One way they show their community involvement and support is by wearing a variety of bracelets. About one in every ten students wears a colored bracelet of some kind. Students even had magnets on their cars supporting troops in Iraq. Some students were seen sporting light pink bracelets encouraging the search for missing college student Brooke Wilberger.

CURRENT SHIFTS

the drift of things

Trends may not seem important, but without them it would have been just another year. The things that we become accustomed to hearing about and seeing are what make us unique. This year the little things became popular. Bracelets for causes, with personalized purses and track jackets to complement. Our view is filled with many different images because fashion is where students express themselves. This leads to the hand made or altered clothing that is currently so prominent. Others seek the growing number of alternative activities. Paintballing is one evolving sport, paired with snowboarding and skiing. Still, other options include playing poker, or just text or instant messaging.

If you have not yet met freshman Anthony Darling, you may not know he is a slalom skier. He has competed in regional events and is ranked 60th in the nation. Darling warns that slalom skiing is very dangerous.

The regulation speed that the boat travels is 36 m.p.h., while he follows at an average of 55 m.p.h. As they reach top speeds he begins to shorten his grip on the 75 ft. rope. The boat heads through a column of buoys. Darling weaves through that column and around six other buoys of his own.

This year he will again participate at the regionals in Washington.

things that make life interesting

Quarterback of the football team or the kid with purple hair, you shared moments with friends that will remain in your memory long after these pages are signed and forgotten.

Perhaps you will always remember that kid you sat next to in Chemistry who could burp the alphabet or maybe the student who sat alone reading sci-fi.

As the year unfolded, we experienced our share of moments that left us feeling appalled, disgusted, or secretly amused. However, we also experienced things that made us stronger as humans and left us feeling good about ourselves long afterward.

Whatever it was that kept us interested, the important thing is what we were. These pages are unique to us because of unique individuals. These are just a few of our memorable times and peers that made them so...

WHAT WE PLAYED

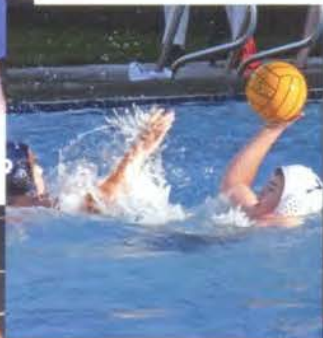

Fall sports had highlights as well as disappointments. Varsity volleyball made state playoffs for the second straight year. The football team had a losing season, but sees promise for the future. Soccer players played their hearts out despite losing all of their games. Water Polo did not get much recognition, but they performed well. Cross Country had it's standouts and they plan for even more success.

Fans flocked to fall sports this year. The excitement was amplified by seniors Aaron Gazeley and Michael Rieke, the student body President and Vice President, as well as junior Zach Hood, who formed the Mullet Squad. They painted their faces and cheered at games.

Winter sports started well with wrestling winning the Springfield Invitational. Boys Basketball got a new coach- Kraig Hoene, a Lebanon Alumni and current history teacher, who brings with him six years of head-coaching experience.

The athletes of Lebanon may not have won state championships, but they played with heart and determination and our fans were friendly enough for us to contend for another sportsmanship award in the process. Without fans, sports would not exist.

coaches who motivate

Over the years those who motivate us Lebanon has had its fair share of coaches. It seems that a few stay around and stick it out, while a batch of newbies come in and work to make an impact.

We've all had those coaches who push us to the breaking point and those who motivate us to keep our heads up. Through it all we know they have our best interest at heart.

"Our coaches are seriously the coolest, they know how to have fun, yet still coach," said junior Christine Molina.

NOTHING LESS

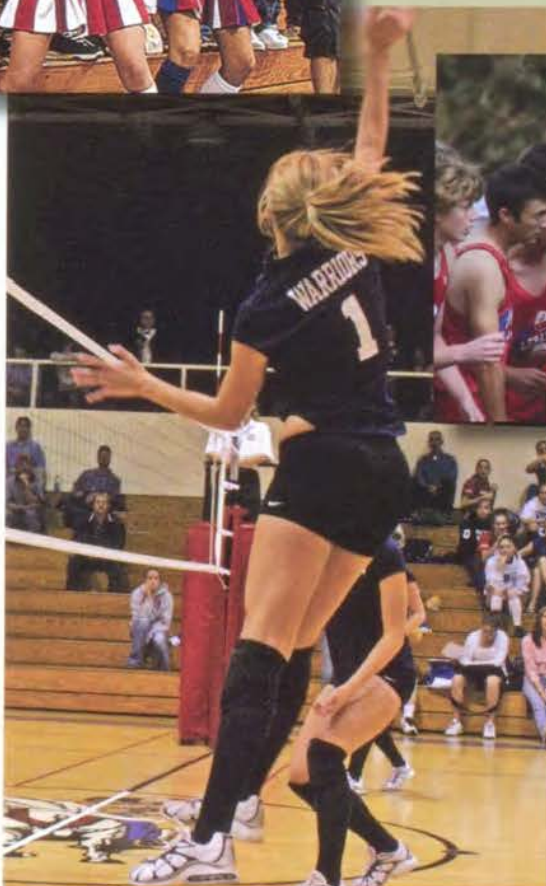

than our very best

In everyday life, we come across numerous trials. Trials that either make or break a person, or team. Despite having a rigorous and trying season, our teams have held it together. As they say, through thick and thin. We made it through the mud of life!

Even if the sports we play don't require helmets, life does. A team is there to catch you when you fall, so take the dive into the water or onto the field, because if you go for the ball it will be in your court. Whatever curve balls life throws you or however many hurdles slow you down, you will always be able to overcome them. It's not a matter of winning or losing, it's how you play the game.

Heads up, freshman Kendra Palinkas aims for a teammate to pass to. "My favorite game was Sweet Home because I gave a girl a fat lip," said Palinkas. Playing water polo demands great conditioning, ball handling skills, and, believe it or not, the ability to wrestle. Finger nails of all players are checked before every game by the referees to make sure they are trimmed short so as to not be able to scratch or draw blood from your opponent!

Parting the waves, senior J.D. Luton and sophomore William Lindberg work together to clear a path to the goalie's box.

three special leaders

The JV team had many great leaders this year and chose three sophomores for the spotlight. Courtney Lamb, Alison Krebs, and Tina Dodge are all hardworking leaders who encouraged their teammates more and more as every day went on. These three were and will be huge assets to the volleyball program.

Ready, Block! senior Rebekah Coady and junior Melissa Bishop jump high to block the ball from the other team. The girls had to work hard together to jump at the same time. This team was blessed with five girls above the six foot mark. Not only were they tall, they were talented and could play any position. The season was definitely affected in a great way by the height of the team.

The season started with a win. That was just the beginning. The team had a goal, to make it to state play-offs.

They knew they had potential but getting there was going to take all of their energy, focus, and team work. They came together and decided that this was the time. They had the height, strength and leadership. So the season went on and they achieved their goal. The team was third in league and went to state play-offs. If the girls have taken anything from the season, it was that they could do anything if they put their mind to it and, of course, that they were very good!

power and excellence

Chosen as leaders and team players, seniors Chelsea Hartman, Kristel Skaflestad and sophomore Breanne Barton were selected for the spotlight by their team mates. Hartman and Barton were all around players excelling in the hitting position. Skaflestad was the shortest of the three, playing the defensive specialist position. The three showed a great deal of leadership and improved all season. Although the team chose them for the spotlight, they agree that they couldn't do it without each other.

A WINNING CONNECTION

Varsity Soccer

This team was not so successful in scoring, but they were successful in many other aspects of the game. Each player contributed something very beneficial to the team and together they had a strong connection.

Many of them know that the game is not always about winning, it is also about how you play and if you play well, that is almost better than winning at times. The players kept a positive attitude throughout the season and continued to work hard.

"TAKE IT TO THE MAX" - JV Football '04

The JV football team of 2004 showed a great deal of pride after the season came to an end. Many practices and late night runs helped to push the players mentally and physically. The team was determined to succeed where others failed. Hard work went a long way for this year's JV football team. Mistakes will come and go, but memories of the magical throws and the immaculate reception stories will never end. As the season progressed, the players worked harder and grew stronger as a team. Although they may not have been on varsity, the boys showed that the future is bright for Lebanon football.

Recognized by their teammates for hard work and great spirit, sophomores Chris Nordstrand and Trevor Kilgore. Many times this dynamic duo pulled through a win for the team.

Kilgore made a total of over 20 touchdowns equaling over 1,000 yards. Nordstrand had 12 touchdown passes to Kilgore. Nordstrand and Kilgore both liked the camaraderie the team showed. If football could be summed up in one word they both would say "intensity."

BITTER SWEET

Varsity Football

This season left a bitter sweet taste in the mouths of many. With only three returning players the varsity team lacked experience but made up for it with effort. A positive attitude and a will to learn kept the team spirits alive. They knew that the season ahead would be a tough one but the boys proved they were strong and stuck with it.

Through all the hard times, they created memories to last them a life time and bonds that would never break. They were not just a bunch of boys out to play football. They were a group with a common interest. They were there for the love of the game.

tenacity

Friends, family and athletic are words often said when talking about these three outstanding football players. Casey Humphrey, Nate Probert and younger brother Seth Probert were all starters on the varsity football team. Humphrey and N. Probert both received all league honors. N. Probert with second team all league and Humphrey with Honorable Mention.

When asked about playing with his older brother S. Probert said "It is different and fun because I know him personally. I like to order him around cause I am the quarterback and I can."

Make the pain go away, sophomore Amanda Martin cringes as she tries to catch her breath at the end of the finish line at one of the home Waterloo meets. Martin said, "It feel's great afterwards!"

The men made a point to all enter the pit the hard way at least once, which left them with great memories but not in the best ranking. However, they did make it in to several newspapers and onto a Oregon Cross Country website!

energy and attitude

Senior Becca Ellis and sophomore Dustin Beyer were selected by the team for their astounding attitudes and efforts.

Road trips created lasting impressions. "My most memorable moment was when the team woke up at 5:00 a.m. and drove up to W.O.U. for the Tournament of Champions. We arrived at 7:30 a.m., only to find out that we didn't run until 12 p.m.! On the bright side, we got some team bonding time in!" said Ellis.

Beyer said, "My favorite part was the Seaside race. We got to stay the night and run the next morning."

According to her teammates, Sigler is a great captain and they hope she will continue on next year. "She always knows what to do," said Britny Stewart.

CHEER

in the winter

Cheerleaders have two seasons a year. The winter is much warmer because they are inside. This season consisted of lots of practice and perfecting their motions and cheers. They even had the chance to attend a state competition to see what they needed to work on to be the best. The squad was young, but that meant hopeful things for future years.

The team showed promise and maturity beyond their age. They made their mistakes, but they improved as the season progressed and won important games that helped to build confidence. Friendships were created, hearts were broken, but the team fought through all the experiences and grew as teammates. They look forward to future years.

Russell Duerr and Steven "Robbie" Zaina are positive influences for the rest of their team. They managed to always stay optimistic and came to play every game. Each member of the team has been playing together since fifth grade. Duerr and Zaina enjoyed the team as well as the coaching. They had lots of fun with Eric Frazier.

PURE DEDICATION

Varsity Basketball

A new start with a new coach gave the team a fresh outlook on the season. They had some trouble, but they kept their heads up.

Besides being teammates, the guys were all friends off the court as well. They created a hangout in the locker room where team bonding occurred. It consisted of a couch, TV, DVD player, Christmas lights and a Nintendo 64.

Despite the losing, fans still came to the games and cheered for their hometown boys. The season may not have been a success, but the team never grew discouraged and they still ran their wind sprints in practice with an all-out passion and intensity.

The two players chosen for the spotlight have more in common than just their curly locks.

Senior Keith Truett and junior Jordan Jantzi were picked because of their hard work, optimism and skill. Neither held back anything.

The team would agree that Truett and Jantzi like to have a good time and make people laugh. These two jokesters kept up team spirits. "Jordi and I have been playing together for years. He always manages to make it fun," said Truett.

TO THE HOOP

Frosh Basketball

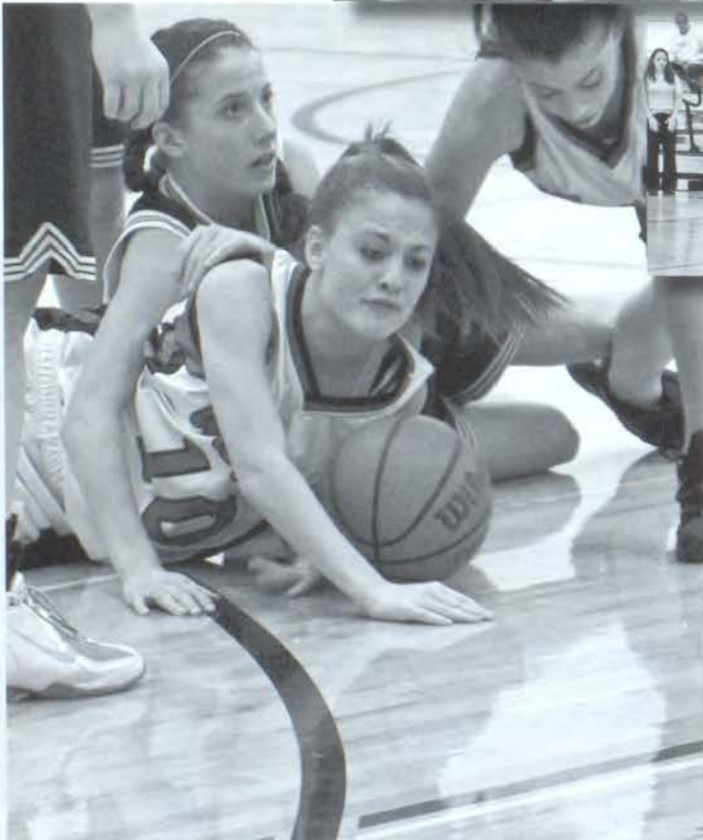

The team was made up of a lot of enthusiastic players. There always seemed to be plenty of cheering from the bench as none of the girls were afraid to use their voices.

Not only were they good at communicating from the side lines, they also chattered on and off the court. Each member knew what it took to become successful.

SHOOT OUT

JV Basketball

This year the team showed cooperation. At the beginning of the season the team was split in two by sophomores and juniors because they did not really know each other. But as the year progressed they became like a family and bonded.

They were able to help each other on a more personal level like a true team. Becoming close really helped.

"We both enjoyed bonding with the sophomores of the team on an everyday basis," said Molina.

Take it all the way, senior captain Maggi Hallock goes up strong to the basket. Hallock always had a positive attitude and helped lead her team to the playoffs along with Hartman and Martinez.

Sink it, freshman Alexis Nissen gets set at the free throw line. Alexis was the only freshman this year to play Varsity.

Good hustle, Senior Gretchen Zehner displays her never give up attitude through her extremely exhausted expression. Gretchen was known for having loyalty to the team, and always doing her best.

INSIDE THE CIRCLE

Varsity Basketball

Spending time on the court off season to train may not sound like fun, although results are evident.

The girls were able to get a jump start on the season, which later helped them earn a third spot in the Mid-western league and a trip to the state playoffs. The team consisted of mainly seniors, but the underclassmen stepped up to where they needed to be.

The team bonded and became closer than ever as the season went on, which in the long run made their skill that much better. Each girl found their strengths and weaknesses, they all meshed together to make a great team.

more than players

They are stars, teammates... friends. Seniors Chelsea Hartman and Jamie Martinez have been teammates since middle school and have played varsity since their freshman year. Both finished in the top ten in the Midwestern league for scoring during their '04-'05 season. Hartman was first and Martinez was eighth. Both young women were honor students and friends on and off the court. Both broke several school records in their sport and set the standard a great deal higher for future ladies. The pair led the Lady Warriors to a playoff berth their senior year after two years of near misses. Their contributions to the team, the school and the community will be missed.

Why settle for less than the best? That is what Coach Jeff Storie believed and wanted the team to work towards achieving. Many hours of practice, hard work and team encouragement paid off in the end.

As the season went along the team faced many changes, such as team members leaving and a change in the head coach.

Tempers flared and attitudes were evident, but they overcame these challenges and became a team with great strengths and few weaknesses. By the end of the season the team knew their limits and had confidence and the courage to excel for the best. The teams' willingness and readiness got them to districts and earning them high ranking.

eager sidekicks

This season the swimmers had to choose the two players who stood out for their kindness, patience and enthusiasm. They picked Zach Rose and Mary Buchheit, with ease.

Rose has only been swimming since his junior year, but he took to the sport with great enthusiasm. Buchheit has been in the sport even before high school. They were not picked for their experience, but for their great leadership and the ability to encourage people to achieve what they did not know they could do.

Determination, immense skill and girl power all come together to create the Explosion Dance Team.

Led by Coach Joann Daniels and Captains Tori Harvey, Barbie McGehee, Cammi Bloom and Vicki Doborvosky, the team was an unstoppable force.

The girls formed a tight-knit and cohesive team. This year the team moved from the Intermediate to Small Team division.

As a small and fresh dance team, they went on to place first at almost every competition and take the Division 4A Small State Champions title. Well done!

Expect greatness next year with the entire team being able to return.

ecstatic champions

Explosion has taken first place in several competitions. In 2000, they were state champions and they hoped to win that title back this season; which is exactly what they did.

A competition atmosphere is much different than a simple performance in front of the student body. "School performances are not as much fun as competitions, I love that my friends get to watch, but the mass of the school does not understand dance," said junior captain Tori Harvey.

Brute Strength, sophomore Nathan Meyer tries to put a move on his opponent during a home meet. The teams were only able to have two home meets, which meant a lot of traveling for the boys.

SMACK DOWN

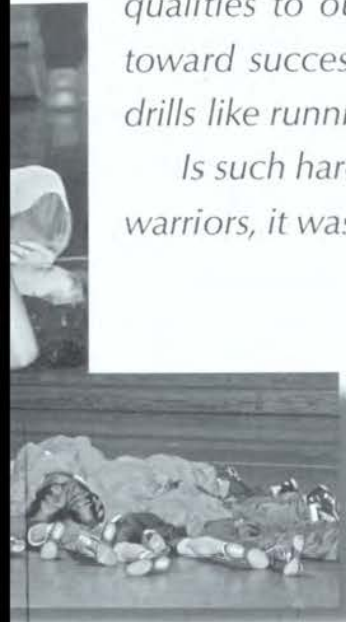

Wrestling

The power of the individual and determination to succeed are important qualities to our wrestlers. The team strives toward success and works to improve with drills like running in the hallways at 6 a.m.

Is such hard work worth it? For this year's warriors, it was. Everyone on the team tasted victory and the success they yearned for. Five team members went to state and the team as a whole placed fifth in districts.

They got along and enjoyed bonding. "Especially Del Nor when we got to pig belly our coaches," said junior Nate Arp, just one of many plagued by injury.

From the time he was just a wee pup, Michael Rieke has been involved with wrestling. Rieke has wrestled on the varsity for three of four years.

He placed first in districts, and eighth at state. Rieke has been one of the top wrestlers for several

His wrestling mentors have been Chris Trask along with his loving parents.

The class of 2005 once again had numerous victories in both tuff puff and powder puff. Everyone involved gave their all no matter the score or final outcome. WHAT WE HONORED

While academics are the back bone of our school, providing structure to the day, clubs are the life-blood, infusing culture, inciting new ideas and creating ways for students to fully explore their true potential.

Clubs provide a means for students to help the underprivileged, explore the business world, mold themselves into the leaders of tomorrow and explore their inner most self to write future award winning poetry.

Those who participate in these non required yet essential organizations are individuals who are not satisfied to merely go to school and learn, they want to expand their options and do new things.

Clubs are an integral part of our daily lives, enriching our school's community and providing us with a view of the lives we could lead.

Students Today Aren't Ready for Sex otherwise known as STARS consisted of upper class men, that means no freshmen, and totaled nearly 120 members.

Their goal was to teach sixth graders what abstinence is. Postponing sexual involvement until their older; that abstinence is the only 100% effective means of protection from disease and all consequences related to sex.

With three adult leaders they broke into teams and covered the surrounding area. They visited nine different schools involving not only sixth grade classes but the eighth graders as well, reaching them with the less conventional "eight grade round up" assembly.

They missed class, got a free T-shirt and pizza lunches but more importantly made a difference educating future generations.

sardines anyone?

The Winter retreat scheduled for January was rescheduled because of the lack of a male chaperone. The retreat took place on March third and fourth.

The trip was only 12 students a far cry from the 60 for the January trip. Despite their small numbers they had a good time. They were able to bond as a group staying up until 3:00 a.m. in a circle on the couches.

They were a different group, straying from the yearly game of "Kissing Rugby" to play four hours of Sardines.

LEND ME YOUR EARS,

The reconstruction of our class schedule and of our theater lead to disadvantages for Poetry and Drama Clubs.

The newly inspired short Wednesdays interrupted the usually harmonious poetry circle that met in room 128. The group showed loyalty to each other by continuing the meetings on the originally scheduled day.

Drama went to their first state event with little harm done by late construction. The troupe returned with high placing but to a gutted auditorium. Delays lead to the overlap of the second state event and the final week of practices for the Winter play. Both went respectably leaving high hopes for less chaotic years to follow.

Overcoming adversity, not an uncommon thing for artists of this nature, proved difficult but more efficient in molding minds than any other year could offer.

duo dramatic

These two double dipping seniors just can not get enough of the fine arts, including choir as well as Drama and Poetry. They both express themselves very freely no matter who listens, despite how shy Hall is of the camera. They have both participated multiple years in these areas; Hall having been a member of them all four years and on Drama leadership board the past two. Pierce came in as sophomore transfer student and became involved with the theater program and poetry club, where she livens up all meetings.

Pep Assemblies, class competitions, spirit weeks and dances. Those are just a few things ASB and student senate members are involved with and organize.

All who are involved with either program became so by applications and peer approval. They are representatives for our classes and ambassadors to the Administration. They make decisions and coordinate activities.

underclassmen

Five to six members from each class were elected to represent their grade as senators. The elections were held the year prior to incumbency and announced before the students left on summer break. Each senator was involved with leadership activities, such as freshman orientation. They sat down at meetings and discussed rules, regulations and the progress of their class. You could say they were the government for each grade level.

TRAVELERS

our capital at a glance

Seven kids and two teachers went to Washington D.C. for the Close-Up government trip. The students left in the early morning and returned eight days later.

Anon-profit organization Close-Up teaches students different political views from instructors and students. The program consisted of approximately 160 teens from Hawaii to Pakistan. The entire group had debates, saw a play and went out to eat while they visited monuments and tourist sites broken into their workshops.

seniors rule

The senior senators played a big role in the student body. They held meetings on a regular basis, plus the general senior meeting held once a month. They organized senior T-shirts, songs, pamphlets for graduation and all the details to go along with it. Being a senior senator was not an easy job, but J.D. Luton, Sarah Wilson, Brea Woodhouse and Brooke Scofield got the job done with accuracy and timeliness.

EXCELLENCE N.H.S.

National Honor Society consists of outstanding young adults. Each reaches for knowledge, service, scholarship, leadership and character. They must maintain a G.P.A. of 3.5 or higher and have excellent character references.

Community service is a big part of what they do; each does an individual and group project for the community.

These people set a positive examples of what you can do with a lot of heart, determination and hard work.

I pledge..., new N.H.S. members state these words prior to being inducted.

give back

NHS held a clothes drive for the Gospel Rescue Mission Homes as a service to better the community, themselves, and people in need. The clothes go to people who are recovering from drug addiction. Hopefully the clothes will make it easier for them to get jobs and become productive citizens. Larry Conard, the president of the charity thanks N.H.S. and hopes L.H.S. participates again in the future.

D.E.C.A.

DECA attends numerous conferences throughout the year. These conferences are designed to help build leadership and communication, and teach students how to interact as professionals.

The skills the students learned here will lead them to amazing achievements.

Working in the student store, learning valuable experience for future endeavors, DECA not only inspires students but molds them into future business leaders of America!

business escape

Early fall, DECA escapes the cold and flies to Arizona for the Western Regional Conference. In Phoenix they all stayed at the Hyatt Regency, while attending workshops to build leadership and communication skills. The best part of the trip was being able to explore Phoenix, check out all the downtown scenery and brand new businesses. Overall the students feel it was definitely worth the expenses considering the skills they acquired and the memories they made.

"It is not about doing good or bad, it is about the experience," said Bruce. At the end of her freshman year she was reporter, then at her sophomore year she was district reporter and chapter reporter, at the end of her junior year she got district secretary and chapter president. "It made a great impact on my life," said Bruce.

COMMON FAITH

shining before men

"Let your light shine before men that they may see your good deeds and glorify our Father in heaven." Matthew 5:16 NIV

Shine was the point of that verse and the reason it was chosen as Generation Living In Future Expectancy's (Generation LIFE's) theme verse. Generation LIFE, the resident "Christian Club" on campus shared core beliefs and members with Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA).

The two separate groups tried to strengthen their members in unique ways. FCA related the messages for God's team to our schools' athletics; while Generation LIFE encouraged members to reflect God's passion to our student body.

Both student ran clubs struggled with the same lack of adult leadership but maintained their regular weekly meetings on Thursdays (FCA) and Fridays (Generation LIFE).

prayer pole

Generation LIFE held its annual "See You at the Pole" (S.Y.A.T.P.) meeting during the third week of school. It contained scripture, worship songs and prayer. A larger group prayer formed before splitting into circles of four to pray for our school, community, country and many others' concerns. The morning "rally 'round the pole,'" as event planner, and President, Natalie Allen called it, ended in doughnuts for everyone.

SERVICE

Key Club

Key club is one of the many clubs that help out our community. Their discussions, among many other things, consist of many community involvement opportunities.

They are responsible for the biannual blood drive, which allows the opportunity for students over the age of seventeen to donate blood to the Red Cross Organization.

Among other tasks, one of the more prolific was their efforts to raise money for the tsunami victims.

working smiles

This was President and junior Lindsey Aikin's third year participating in Key Club. They have planned a walk for diabetes, food baskets in November, a coin drive to buy Christmas toys for children, a highway clean up, a blood drive and beach clean up.

"[Key Club] gives me the opportunity to give back to the community what they have given me." Aikin enjoys her involvement in our community greatly. "Working at the Soup kitchen is the most rewarding because you get to see the people from your own town benefitting."

THE UNIQUE brick house

Starting their days with morning paper routes and grocery shopping many students find useful skills through the Special Education department.

The student have a variety of hobbies- many enjoying the music that comes with their lunch break and often even dance with excitement. Their positive attitudes and fresh perspectives on life impact the student body daily. They may face extra challenges but they also grow to be stronger.

helping hands

Hardworking, reaching goals, and a little shy. Of those three things they all describe T.J. Nolan. During lunch he liked to hang out with his friends, twins Jeff and Joseph Lang.

Nolan loved to work on the grounds crew, where he was able to care for the lawns. This was one of his most valuable experiences. He was with the brick house for seven years. "T.J. is an awesome worker," said teacher Marie Belvin.

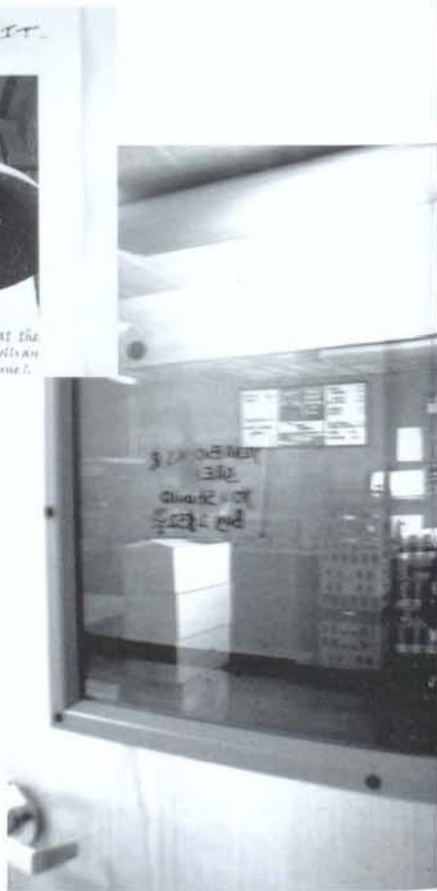

This year Nolan is graduating and he plans to find a job. Best of everything to you T.J.!

WHAT WE BOUGHT

Whether it be restaurants, the local supermarket or a car dealership, the purchasing of ads within these pages provides a great deal of financial support, ensuring we are capable of making the year's book. These businesses get their names publicized and out in the public eye gaining them more business and their generosity benefits our program. Family and friends ads aid us as well.

People are not aware that the fun memory filled pages in the back are almost more important to us than to them. The success of people buying the book and the ads inside have made it easier for us to continually produce a higher quality yearbook.

 (folded poem by Sarah 2004)*

Sarah Boykin

September 30, 1988 - October 30, 2004

Our fallen sophomore Warrior wanted desperately to go to LHS and graduate, like her brother Tom (class of 2004). Sarah looked forward to school, being friends, the structure of classes and said, "Without school, I am a rock." Her hopes were to go to the Art Institute and then on to the University. She will not graduate with her class but she fought a brave battle and never gave up on life. Sarah was more than that kid with cancer, she was talented, intelligent, funny...my hero and an angel who cared. How poignant that the 2004 Winter Formal theme was "I Will Remember You."

Though cancer gave you eternal youth, you gave us your lifetime of love, laughter, and memories. Our lives will never be the same. We miss you, Sunshine. Follow your dreams with angel wings.

And I know there'll be no more tears in heaven.

Would you know my name if I saw you in heaven?
Would it be the same if I saw you in heaven?
I must be strong and carry on,
'Cause I know I don't belong here in heaven.

by Eric Clapton

Kaylee,
 You've come a long way baby!
 Congratulations to our loving Senior
 Love,
 Mom, Dad, Gabe and John

*Sara,
 Life awaits you, make the most of it.
 We hope all of your dreams come true.
 Keep your faith in God.
 Love,
 Mom, Dad and Levi*

They are daughters and friends,
 Sister and twins:

Amber and Brittni Matz!!

When they were born,
 it was truly a GREAT day!
 Almost 18 years of living has got them to THIS day!
 Childhood days were full of laughter, friends and toys

Now, it is the same
 Just add chocolate-chip cookies and boys.

We have enjoyed these two girls
 More than a parent can say
 And we're not looking forward
 To sending them away.

But...as they keep their goals and standards high

This life, we know, they will win.
 Not only do they have their faith and family,

they also have their twin!

We love you so much!
 Mom and Dad, Hollie, Heather and Breanna

DECA

A strong leader, a great organizer, enthusiastic a positive person to be around.

Energetic, optimistic, agreeable, always willing to help nice to talk to.

An easy person to work with, a strong leader, open to new ideas, a positive person to be around, responsible.

Speaking of each other

A good friend, tells a joke at the right moment, responsible, dependable always willing to help.

Always willing to help, great at planning and organizing, humorous, responsible, dedicated, a good listener, reliable.

To the officers of 2004-2005:

Wow, what a great year! We all worked so hard and learned so much. I would like to thank all of you for your contributions to our success this year. We increased our membership, went to two conferences, and had some social activities as well. It was a busy year.

It has also been a fun year! I really enjoyed working with such a great group of people. You have been optimistic, humorous and flexible. We worked hard and had fun doing it. We did a great job planning and organizing our trips to the leadership conferences. The conference in Phoenix was a great time of learning and fun, I had a great birthday.

Thank you for the work you have done and for your companionship during our challenges and accomplishments this year in DECA.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Edwards

*There are no
impossible dreams
There are no
invisible seams
Each night when the day is through
I don't ask much
I just want you*

I Love You,

Justin

*Casey,
We are so proud of you!
Thank you for bringing
so much happiness
into our lives.*

*We love you,
Mom, Dad, Chelsea,
Cami and Jim*

Congratulations
Katie,
Thanks for all
the fun memories.
We are so proud of you and
love you so much.
Love,
Mom & Dad

LeaAnee~
From the time you were born we were proud of you.
As we've watched you grow, you have kept us
proud of you!
Our love, Mom & Dad
Happy Graduation!

TORN

Torn out of our grade separations and placed into subject oriented academies we entered the year. Living, Physical, Social and Information were the four strands students chose from. This was more than a newly remolded building.

Being divided into smaller communities has furthered friendships as a result of similar schedules with certain people all year long.

As the year ends some will go on, and others have the reassurance of being in their system again, together.
